BOARD OF PAUPER TRUSTEES DEFIES MAYOR REMOVED

Refusal to Reinstate Superintendent English Followed by Demand for Resignations, Backed Up With Threat of Removal---Given 45 Minutes to Act.

After a short but exciting conference with Mayor Fitzgerald at City Hall at 11 o'clock to-day, at which the seven trustees of the pauper institutions of the city refused to reinstate James F. English, superintendent of the Long Island Hospital and almshouse, the Mayor pronounced this emphatic ultimatum:

"Resign by 12 o'clock to-day or I will remove you."

The five men and two women officials bowed and left the office. The Mayor had put the time limit on their career as trustees, and it consisted of just forty-five minutes.

At 12:05 the Mayor removed the board and appointed John B. Martin as single head of the department.

Mayor Pronounces Doom of Trustees.

Immediately after the conference Mayor Fitzgerald made this statement to the reporters:

"At 12 o'clock, in the event of my failure to receive the resignation of the trustees, I shall remove the whole board and appoint John B. Martin, Penal Institutions Commissioner, single head of the department.

"The refusal of the Board to grant my request, made twice, for a conference over the English matter, and their lack of desire to co-operation with the Mayor in preserving harmony in the different departments of the city, is the cause for my action.

Civil Service Man.

"The English case is only incidental, and was only mentioned incidentally at this morning's conference.

"James F. English is a civil service appointee, having been appointed by Mayor Collins after taking examination in which he attained 85 per cent, and which examination had been advertised, but at which no applicants appeared besides Mr. English.

"Under the civil service laws Mr. English cannot be discharged without a hearing. My request made and repeated to the board again Saturday for a conference with them with a view of giving English a hearing, was voted down in the board both times. The board stated to me that, in view of the nature of the charges against English, a hearing would be useless.

"The position at Long Island is a hard one to fill, there having been six superintendents there in the last few years.

"In view of the refusal of the board to confer with me and their lack of desire to promote harmony, I believe that I am justified in my actions."

Trustees Are Firm.

Following are the trustees who were summoned before the Mayor in connection with the discharge of His Honor's old Sixth Ward political friend, English:

W. Preston Parker, chairman; Walter Hunnewell, secretary; Miss Frances R. Moss, Bernard J. Rothwell, William J. Sullivan, Miss Maud M. Rockwell and Dr. David D. Scannell. Nearly all of the trustees are from the Back Bay district and are prominent in sociological work.

When the Mayor declared his position Mr. Parker announced at once:

"I shall not resign."

"Neither shall I," added Mr. Hunnewell.

When the resignation of English was demanded it is alleged that he replied:

"The Mayor is with me, and this board will go before I go."

Mr. English apparently spoke by the book. The Mayor made one trip from Old Orchard and tried in vain to get the trustees to reinstate the superintendent.

Look for Sensation.

One of the peculiarities about the case is that the principal in bringing the charges against English was Dr. Scannell, who was the appointee of the Mayor. It is believed that the sensational action of the Mayor will be followed by revelations that will prove of a more sensational character.

Superintendent English, who was slated by the trustees to go to-morrow, was appointed November 1, 1904, by the late Mayor Patrick A. Collins at a salary of $2,500 per year.

President of Intemperate Women's Home

ASKS MORAN TO EXPLAIN

Rev. James H. Reed Calls District Attorney Mistaken in Releasing Inmates.

Institution's Authorities Deny the Charge That It Is a "Private Prison."

To seek an explanation, the Rev. James Reed, president of the Massachusetts Home for Intemperate Women, corner Binney and Smyrna streets, Roxbury, denounced by District Attorney John B. Moran as a "private prison," and from which he has ordered the release of the twenty-seven women inmates, called upon the prosecuting attorney in his office to day.

The officials of the institution declare that a grievous mistake has been made. They say that the women who have been treated in the home have done but little work and that this has been to employ them, to keep them from idleness, to help them eke out their suport while inmates. The officials say that last year but $13,000 was contributed for the support of the institution and despite the assistance of the inmates, the house ran over $2,000 behind.

Rev. Mr. Reed, while waiting to be received into Mr. Moran's private office said, to a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN:

"Home Properly Conducted."

"I had a conference to-day with Edward C. Johnson, father-in-law of Governor Guild and our most active director. We decided that it would be well for me to have a talk with the District Attorney.

"I do not think that Mr. Moran understands the exact situation. The home has been conducted in a perfectly proper manner. If the directors had the slightest idea that the home was not all right we would have nothing to do with it."

Mrs. Ellen O. Tuttle, probation officer, to-day refused to send any prisoners whom the courts had sentenced to the House of Correction on Deer Island to any of the homes for intemperate women. She declared that she would ask a ruling from Chief Justice Brown as to what she should do in the future as to any of these institutions.

List of Women's Homes.

The official list of homes to which women are sent by police for intemperance and petty offences are the Massachusetts Home for Intemperate Women, House of the Good Shepherd, Rescue Home of North End Mission, Welcome Home in Dorchester, under the jurisdiction of St. Stephen's Episcopal Parish, and the Dedham Home in Dedham.

Sixteen of the women inmates of the home left the place last night. But to-day some of the women declared that they are willing to remain in the institution, which has some of the most responsible people in Boston as patrons and patronesses.

Inmates Who Chose to Stay.

These inmates preferred to stay, although released by the District Attorney: Kate Taylor, Mary Hall, Jessie Bowers, Mary Bainbridge, Annie Lee, Bridget O'Brien, Florence La Rochelle, Jennie Burns, Catherine Mahoney, Lena Orr, Nellie Eagan, Rosie Doherty, Kate Rogers, Rosie Marsh and Catherine McGrath.

Ten of the above list had completed their

TELLS HOW BANK WAS LOOTED OF MILLION

CASHIER OF CHICAGO INSTITUTION PLACES BLAME OF WRECK ON MISSING PRESIDENT.

CHICAGO, August 9.—It developed to-day that much of the money stolen by Paulo Stensland, former who robbed the institution of over $1,000,000 and fled, was lost in an attempt on his part to exploit the Northwest. It is said that it was one of his dreams to found a colony of his countrymen in the province of Saskatchewn and through this reap a vast fortune.

It was learned to-day that Henry W. Hering, cashier of the bank, is in the city and that he proposes to give himself up. He asserts that he can show that he had no part in the big robbery.

From 9 p. m. till 11 p. m. a reporter and the cashier sat on a bench in one of the city's parks. In these two hours Mr. Hering told the story of his connection with the bank. The cashier does not think he can be correctly described as a fugitive from justice. When he left the city on Saturday he simply went up the lake for a day's rest. He reached Chicago Monday morning, got on a car and rode to the bank. Just as he reached the sidewalk he saw a man pasting the notice of the closing of the bank on its doors. He back-tracked and headed down town.

Nothing to Do with Peculations.

Finally he reached a friend's house and called the bank's number, but he got the busy signal and finally gave it up.

Mr. Hering is insistent in his statement that he had nothing whatever to do with the peculations of the bank's funds. He swears he has not profited one penny by the irregularities, and asserts that although cashier of the bank, he was merely a clerk for Stensland; that all he did was to carry out Stensland's orders.

He declares that Stensland's instructions were such that there was no way on their face of determining that any crooked business was going on. Hering is a heavy-set, stolid individual, looking not unlike Grover Cleveland, when he was Governor of New York! He either has no nerves or has them under most absolute control. He has a good, square, honest face, with gray, unwinking eyes that look through you through and through. Last night he had the repose and calmness of an innocent man, and the story he told bore every superficial evidence of being true.

Mr. Hering swears he has no knowledge of just how and when the notes said to be forgeries were signed by Stensland.

Signatures Good to Him.

"As a matter of fact," said he, "at this moment I do not know they are forgeries. The signatures were good enough to deceive me."

Whenever Stensland needed money enough to bolster up his operations he worked as follows: "Mr. Stensland would come to my desk," said Mr. Hering, "and say to me: 'Mr. Hering, please make out a certain number of notes (the number of which he would give me) for these amounts,' he giving me a memorandum for them. I then made them out and sent them to him in the regular routine of business. Later, generally the next day, they were returned to me duly signed by various people, or at least they had the alleged signatures of various people.

"Mr. Stensland ordered me to place them to the credit of his personal account and would then draw checks on his personal account for the various enterprises which dragged him to ruin."

"Did he ever utilizie the names of any of the employes on these notes?"

Store Was Chief Millstone.

"I only know of one instance. Before the last report to the State auditor there was an overdraft of $26,000 which had to be taken care of in some manner. He got two employes of the co-operative store, which was the chief millstone around his neck, to sign notes for this amount, and this paper was used to conceal the overdraft."

"My suspicions were aroused some time ago, but I made up my mind that it was my duty to say something to Mr. Stensland about five weeks ago. The multitude of notes piled upon notes had worried me so that I became sick from anxiety, and I went away for a few days' rest.

"When I came back I walked into his office and said: 'Now, Mr. Stensland, you know this indebtedness is getting too large, and it ought to be fixed up in some other way or the bank will be in trouble.'

"He sat for a moment and then said: 'Yes, I know, but I have every reason to believe I will have it all fixed up shortly.'"

This talk with Hering evidently was the thing that led Stensland to make up his mind to skip. He worked during the day and late at night, evidently casting up the amount he had stolen, and preparing the document which was found in his safety deposit box last Sunday. In the letter which his son received, and which brought on the crash, he stated that in the memorandum would be found a record of his indebtedness to the bank, footing up to $500,000, and also a statement by Cashier Hering of a further indebtedness of $530,000, which, to quote the letter, "Hering says I owe the bank."

Mr. Hering admitted last night that he had made out his statement, and it was the one submitted by him to his chief five weeks ago, when he made a demand on Stensland to "fix matters."

CHORUS GIRLS' JOKE LED TO THAW TRAGEDY?

Visitors at White Studio Gave Name of Mrs. Thaw to Attendant.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—District Attorney Jerome is said to be investigating a story that a chorus girl's joke led to the shooting of Stanford White by Harry Thaw. Florenz Ziegfeld, a theatrical manager, says that a chorus girl in one of his shows told him before he sailed for Europe that she and two other girls called at White's studio and, finding him not in, jokingly told the attendant to inform Mr. White that Mrs. Harry Thaw had called. Mr. Ziegfeld said the girl told him that White, the next day, sent a note to Mrs. Thaw, expressing his regret at his absence, and despatched a basket of roses to her apartments.

The chorus girls believed that Thaw saw the roses, the card attached, and read the note. The chorus girl later went to Europe. She may be a witness at the trial.

$5,000 LIBEL SUIT BY COOK

Special to the Boston American.

SALEM, Aug. 9.—Suit for $5,000, alleging slander, has been entered by Mary McGowan, a cook, against her former employer, Mrs. Lucia Faunce of Lynn. Mrs. Faunce is the wife of George P. Faunce of Faunce & Spinney, one of the largest shoe firms in Lynn. Mr. and Mrs. Faunce sailed on Tuesday for an extensive tour of Europe, so that the defendant has not yet been served with the papers in the suit.

CALL ON MORAN TO EXPLAIN ATTACK ON HOME FOR INTEMPERATE WOMEN

PRESIDENT CONFERS WITH PROSECUTOR

Rev. James H. Reed, Head of Institution, Says District Attorney Is Mistaken.

27 INMATES SET FREE

sentence some time ago and were at liberty to go, but preferred staying.

The other five still had some time to serve, but were released by the district attorney, but, like the others, preferred to remain.

Mr. Moran declares that the women brought to the place are put to work in the sewing room and laundry without pay other than their bed and board. By this labor, he declares, the institution last year reaped $13,813.78, according to the official report of the institution.

These women were all prisoners of Suffolk County and awaiting trial in the Superior Court on appeals in drunk convictions in the lower courts. Mr. Moran contends that by being in the home they were made to work for the enrichment of a private institution and were kept prisoners.

Moran Has Full Power.

Mr. Moran, as District Attorney, has full power to nol pros the cases against these women whom he has ordered released.

Rev. James B. Reed, pastor of the New Jerusalem Church, president; Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, vice-president; Mrs. Isabel Potter of Brookline, secretary, and Mrs. W. W. Boyden of Roxbury, treasurer of the home, are emphatic in their denials of the charges made by Mr. Moran.

All the women had been placed on probation and allowed to go to their homes under bonds.

Allowed Through Custom.

For over a dozen years women brought into court on the charge of drunkenness have been allowed, through custom, the alternative of going to jail or being placed on probation and sent to this and other homes maintained for the purpose of caring for them.

Here is Mr. Moran's order:

"The Officers, Superintendent and Matron of the Massachusetts Home for Intemperate Women, Corner Smyrna and Binney Streets, Boston, Mass.:

"I hereby notify you that I have entered a 'nol pros' on the back of the complaint in each of the following cases in which the defendants are now confined at your home.

"You are to immediately notify each of them that her case is finally disposed of, and that she is at liberty to leave the home at once. Any restraint of any of these defendants will render you liable to legal action."

Obeyed the Order.

The order was delivered by Clerk Doherty, of Mr. Moran's office. Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Chapriot, the matrons, immediately responded to the demands.

The former, when Mr. Doherty had concluded, told the inmates that in view of Mr. Moran's action they were of course free to leave at any time, but that any of them who desired might stay and receive wages with board and keep, as had been the custom with other inmates who wished to remain after their discharge.

Moran Gives Women Money.

Mr. Doherty then pulled a roll of greenbacks from his pocket. He explained that "Mr. Moran felt that some poor creatures might need car fare." Then each of the emancipated intemperates was given $1 or $2.

One after another the released inmates came down the hall and said good-by to the matron and Mrs. Charpiot. When the last woman who wanted to leave had gone, a roll call showed that 11 had remained of their own free will, and these will receive besides their board and keep wages running from $2 a week to $25 a month.

MORAN FINDS HOME IS PRIVATE PRISON

District attorney's report of his investigation of the home is as follows:

The Massachusetts Home for Intemperate Women, corner of Smyrna and Binney streets, Boston, Mass., was incorporated March 30, 1887.

Section 2 of article 1 of the by-laws of this home reads as follows:

"Section 2. Its object is to maintain a home for the care and reformation of intemperate women, furnishing them with medical treatment and providing them with a temporary refuge until they can obtain employment and be restored to society as useful members."

On Friday last a woman probation officer in the Superior Court informed me that there was at this home a woman who was not in good health, and stated that she would like to have this woman's case called for disposition on the following Monday. I thereupon assigned the case for disposition Monday. On that day the woman defendant was brought into court by the matron of this home. The woman defendant was placed on probation and allowed to go to her own home.

Kept Doors Locked.

I made inquiries of the matron, and then learned that there were about thirty women at the home, the doors of which were kept locked, and all of the women being required to work from 7 o'clock in the morning until 5 at night, with the exception of an hour for dinner; that each of them was confined there for a length of time equal to the sentence which the woman received in the lower court. I found on further investigation that no prisoners were taken at this home except able-bodied and healthy women; that if a woman defendant was sentenced in the lower court and appealed, she was taken to jail to wait the calling of her case in the Superior Court; that while at the jail communication was had with her through somebody at the jail, that as a result of such conversation the matron of the home would call at the jail, bail out the defendant, take her to the home and confine her there and put her at labor, and subsequently bring her to the Superior Court when the case was put on the trial list, and that the woman defendant was released on probation, and she was then immediately taken back to the home and placed at work and kept there for the same length of time which she was sentenced to imprisonment in the lower court.

I found on further inquiry that occasionally when a woman is convicted of a misdemeanor in the lower court she is given the option of serving a sentence in the House of Correction or of being confined in this home. If she consents to be confined in the home she is placed on probation and taken to the home, and there confined for the length of time that she would have been sentenced in the lower court.

As a result of the whole of my investigation I find that this home is a private prison; that it exists without any authority of law so far as a right to imprison persons is concerned; that no court can grant to a private individual or to a corporation the right to imprison any person whether guilty or not guilty of crime.

I find that this home during the year ending March 31st, 1906, had received for laundry work $13,663.93, and for sewing $149.85.

I find that no compensation is paid to these women prisoners.

I find that the real object of the home is not as set forth in its by-laws—the maintaining of a home for the care and reformation of intemperate women, furnishing them with medical treatment and providing them with a temporary refuge until they can obtain employment—but is a place of imprisonment, where the prisoners are compelled to work without compensation.

Believing that this imprisonment is not in accordance with any law, I have carefully examined the papers in each case, and have gone over with the probation officers the records of each defendant, and I am of the opinion that the ends of justice require no further punishment of these defendants. I have therefore entered upon the complaint in each case "nol pros" and have notified those in charge of the home to this effect, and I have directed them to open their prison doors and allow their prisoners immediate liberty.

I am informed that there are other homes to which prisoners are sent, and I will within a short time investigate each one of them and take such action as seems under the circumstances proper.

I recognize the right of the court to place a defendant on probation with the understanding that the defendant, for her benefit, but not for her punishment, is to become a voluntary inmate of a home. Her going to the home must be voluntary at the beginning and her remaining there must be voluntary. If her going is involuntary or her remaining there is involuntary, if, instead of having open doors through which she can go at any time, she is kept locked up as a prisoner, her confinement is illegal.

Whether the other homes are carrying on their affairs in the same manner in which this one has been carried on I do not at the present time know, but will inform myself fully in relation to it within a short period of time.

This home is not under the management of the State, and is in no way responsible to it under the law. All the earnings of the inmates go to the corporation itself and are spent in such manner as the corporation desires. JOHN B. MORAN,
District Attorney.

DOCTOR FINDS RUNAWAY SON IN SHOE SHOP

Son of Rich Man Left Home After Quarrel With Mother About Girl.

Special to the Boston American.

LYNN, Aug. 9.—Leaving home because of the remonstrance of his mother for his attentions to a young woman, Hartley Claverly, son of Dr. Richard Claverly of Montpelier, Vt., has been found working in a Lynn shoe factory for $6 a week.

Reconciliation has taken place. Throwing aside his overalls, young Claverly dropped his work in the factory and went with his father to Boston, where he has been reunited with his mother, who was waiting anxiously to hear if the Lynn clue to her son's disappearance was the right one.

It was a little over a week ago that Claverly, who is only nineteen years of age, left his home and came to Boston. His family is prominent in the Vermont city, and is wealthy and influential. Dr. Claverly is one of its best-known surgeons. Young Claverly was a freshman last year at Dartmouth College and was to return in the Fall.

Quarrel Over a Girl.

Mrs. Claverly and her son quarreled over the young man's attentions to a young woman, fearing that possibly it might turn his mind away from his studies. Following the talk that the mother and son had on the subject, the boy left his home abruptly.

The next day a canoe which young Claverly was accustomed to use was found bottom up in a pond near his home. Search failed to reveal the body.

On leaving home Claverly had gone to Lynn. At the factory of T. V. Harney, in West Lynn, he asked for employment.

"I know nothing about the business," he said. "I am anxious to learn. Give me a chance."

His clean-cut appearance impressed the superintendent and the Dartmouth freshman was put to work at $6 a week in the packing room. He gave the name of L. J. Price. He worked hard, and was getting along well when his father appeared.

Dr. and Mrs. Claverly had not the slightest idea where their son was. They started with Boston, and secured the aid of a private detective. Through an accidental meeting with Herbert Austin, a Dartmouth man, who is a brakeman on the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn road during the Summer months, they learned that Hartley frequently rode back and forth between the two cities.

Son Found at Last.

Dr. Claverly came to Lynn. One after another he visited the larger factories until he came to Harney's. He described his son to the superintendent. The latter touched a bell.

"Tell Price in the packing room that I want to see him a minute," he said to the boy who answered.

A moment later Dr. Claverly was smiling at the overalled, perspiring youth who stood doubtfully in the doorway.

It didn't take long for the scene to change. The boy and father were soon shaking hands. He changed his clothes, and started away from the factory. To-day he is in Montpelier at home.

MURDER STILL SWEEPS OVER CZAR'S DOMAIN

Valuable Estates Destroyed by Incendiaries and Stock Slain in the Fields.

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—The London Times publishes a St. Petersburg dispatch which says that reports are constantly reaching the capital to the effect that robbery and murder continue daily.

Some of the instances mentioned follow:

In Gomel a bomb burst in a private residence.

Bombs have been discovered in Yalta, Kaluga and Samara roads. Firearms have been seized in Poltava and Theodosia.

A record of murder includes the assassination of the commandant of the Pyatigorsk garrison by a crazy officer; the shooting of a woodman in Riga by the rural guards; the killing of a prison director at Brest-Litovsk, and the shooting of a lieutenant, a policeman and a woman and a commissionaire in Warsaw.

Agrarian riots are reported from a number of places. The buildings on the estate of M. Lukyanoff, near Poltava, are burning. Prince Kochubey's estate has also been burned down and a large quantity of valuable stock in the fields killed. In the province of Orel rural guards arrested an agitator, and peasants who attempted to rescue them an killed one guard and wounded two.

A note in the room bore this inscription: "Pistol in my room belongs to Richmond Stetson. I stole it from him."

SMART SET IN AUTOS ENJOYED WONDERLAND

They Prefer the Crowds and Pleasure of This Resort to More Fashionable Ones.

PALMISTRY GREAT FEATURE

Bostonians and Massachusetts people in general are in the grasp of the most popular idea which has been spread about for a long time. It is an afternoon and evening at Wonderland Park, the "Mystic City of the Sea," at Revere.

Lined up for blocks alongside the big Boulevard entrance to the park last night were automobiles galore. And it was not only last night that they were there. The same condition of affairs has existed almost continually. They come from the most popular fashionable resorts away up on the North Shore, and the way they do enjoy taking in all the amusements is simply a treat.

There is one thing, however, that few who journey down to Wonderland fail to do. That is to have their fortunes told. This is really a "fad." The "Temple of Palmistry" is one of "the" places of the park. On one side of it is the Japanese village, with its dainty Japanese women and quaint buildings, while next door to the right is the "Foolish House," sometimes known as the "Third Degree." In front is "Love's Journey," and many a time it has happened that after one of the corps of wonderful palm readers, headed by the world renowned Virginia Knapp, has told her that she was to marry a man whose eyes are blue and hair was light, tall and good looking, that off they went for a ride on "Love's Journey," and—well, that's another story.

But Virginia Knapp's reputation is world-wide. She has read the palms of the most noted people, and her wonderful predictions have seldom failed to come true. With her is Miss Daly, another gifted woman in the science of palmistry, and her readings, too, are without a flaw.

Told of Tucker's Death.

Virginia Knapp is the woman who forecasted many months ago that Charles Louis Tucker would die in the electric chair, and at the same time declared that he was innocent of the murder, and that the hand of a woman killed the spinster, Mabel Page.

"Since I have been at Wonderland," said Virginia Knapp to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter yesterday, "some of the most prominent people in Massachusetts have come to me to have their palms read. Mrs. Curtis Guild, Jr., the wife of the Governor; Lieutenant Governor Eben S. Draper and many others have been here. When the Sunday laws committee from the Legislature visited Wonderland they came in to have their fortunes told. We are anxiously waiting to see if they will say anything about us in their report.

Story of Romance.

Last night Press Representative Walsh let out the best story of the season. [illegible] Mountain House, Arkansis, Winton Truman had come to Boston. He had met Clara Knapp, the handsome daughter of Mrs. Knapp, several months before and as a matter of fact it didn't happen to be on "Love's Journey" either. It was love at first sight, and when Mr. Truman was forced to leave for the far West to attend his business interests there he had the promise of the young woman that she would be his wife next October. Love's call couldn't wait, however, and Mr. Truman started East. He arrived in New York Tuesday and wired to Mrs. Knapp that he was coming to Boston in his touring car, and that the marriage should take place at once.

Virginia Knapp unintentionally let out the secret to "Billy" Walsh, who sees to it that everything in the park is properly given to the public. "A marriage in Wonderland to-night," said Walsh, and the plan was arranged. The newspaper men alone were "let in" on the secret. The park band volunteered their services for the occasion and orders went flying over the telephone to Boston for a royal spread at the park.

Wedded in Haste.

Vinton Truman arrived in Boston early yesterday morning. He was here scarcely an hour when he received word that he was wanted at once on business in the West. Clara Knapp and her mother went to Boston immediately. With them went Mrs. Daly, and they were met in town by the best man. At two o'clock, in Barrister's Hall, Justice of the Peace Harrison Burnham tied the knot.

Few minutes elapsed before the newly married couple were off for their new home—and the press agent's story "stung." Therefore, there was nothing doing in the wedding line at Wonderland.

ILLUMINATION CARNIVAL HIT

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 9.—The city is fast filling with a crowd in anticipation of the big day of the carnival.

Yesterday the feature was the naval and military parade. Colonel Herbert Bliss acted as chief marshal. The boys in blue made a brave showing in their natty uniforms and the crowd was not slow in giving vent to their appreciation.

The illuminations and the water parade in the evening attracted many visitors. The 191 yachts of the New York Yacht Club aglow with light and flags, made a pretty picture. Weaving in around the fleet of anchored yachts, the decorated floats shown up by the search lights from the forts and naval stations called for a share of the applause.

SAYS WOMAN DID COURTING

The countercharge brought by L. O. Ball, of Medford, caused by the breach of promise suit entered against him by Mrs. Lydia F. Miller, is not yet known to Mrs. Miller, who is lying critically ill at her home, according to her daughter, Dr. Eva Green.

"Why, mother was sure that she and Mr. Ball were to be married upon his return from the West, and even went so far as to purchase wedding clothes," the daughter said.

Mr. Ball has engaged Attorney C. F. Eddy as counsel. He says: "Why, I never spoke of marriage to her. She bothered me to death all the time, but I put my foot down on her advances and she is sore."

ATHLETIC DIRECTORS DON'T MENTION FORD

A meeting of the registration committee of the N. E. A. A. U., together with President Maccabe, was held at the office of E. E. Babb yesterday afternoon. The case of Frank J. W. Ford, the leader in the athletics' fight for better prizes, was not discussed at all. It was decided that the N. E. A. A. U. pay the railroad fares and entrance fees of the winners in the events at Wood Island to the national championships which are to be held at [illegible] Island on Sept. 7 and 8.

GRIEF FOR UNREQUITED LOVE LED BROKER MILDRAM TO END HIS LIFE

GIRL, FOR THE LOSS OF WHOSE LOVE BROKER KEPT PROMISE OF SUICIDE

Had Threatened Suicide if Miss Isabel Boyd Persisted in Rejecting Him.

Grief following rejection by the woman he loved, it has just been learned, was the real reason for the suicide of Louis A. Mildram, the young Boston broker who leaped to his death from the steamer Prince George in the harbor of Yarmouth.

The key to the motive that actuated the broker in his tragic act is contained in the last words he spoke to his sweetheart, Miss Isabel Boyd, a prominent young women of Needham, after she had rejected him.

"Isabel, I can not live without you," he said. "You must not do this, for it will break my heart. If you insist I will kill myself."

The young men carried out his threat on Tuesday, but nothing was known then as to what led him to end his life. Business troubles were given as the motive.

Miss Boyd is a daughter of the late Captain Alphens P. Boyd, who died a month ago. He left a large fortune made in the shipping business as a partner of Arthur Sewall, of Bath, Me. She is twenty six year old, and is a graduate of the Needham High School.

Mildram Loses in Stocks.

The young couple met four years ago and were seen much in each other's company. The rumor circulated that they were to be married. Then came the story of financial reverses for Mildram through dealing in stocks.

Shortly before the death of her father, it is declared, Miss Boyd became convinced that it would be better for her and her sweetheart to part. It was when she told him of her determination, it is said, that he made the threat that if she persisted in it he would put an end to his existence.

Mildram made several visits to the Boyd home in an attempt to regain his old footing with the young woman but they were in vain. Miss Boyd remained firm in her conviction that it was better for both of them that they should part.

To stop Mildram's annoying her daughter, Mrs. Boyd two weeks ago closed their mansion in Needham, she going to visit her sons, who are in the mining business in Great Falls, Mont., and Isabel going to Duluth, Minn., to visit her sister, Mrs. R. E. Denfeld. The older sister, Mrs. Susan Abbott, who has been living at home, departed at the same time for Wiscasset Me., for the Summer.

The departure of his sweetheart to remain away indefinitely convinced Mildram that there was no further hope for him. That he made a threat to Miss Boyd to end his life is known, as she has repeated it to her friends, telling them she was seriously worried about it.

Romance of Two Nations, Boston Broker's Marriage

Man and Woman in Love Romance

| THE GROOM. | THE BRIDE. |
|---|---|
| Henry G. Dillaway. | Mrs. Louise Alice Markoe. |
| Aged sixty-eight years. | Aged forty-nine years |
| Senior member of Dillaway & Co., brokers. | Daughter of Lord Joseph Moore. |
| Divorced forty-one years after marriage. | Highly educated in France. |
|  | Cousin of bridegroom's divorced wife. |

A romance filled with all the ardor, all the spirit of youth, a romance which followed the marriages of both of the twain, when the bridegroom had been separated from his wife of forty-one years by divorce and the bride had been separated from her husband by death, has found a fitting culmination in the chapel of the South Congregational Church in the wedding of Henry G. Dillaway, a prominent Boston broker, and Mrs. Louise S. Markoe, widow of the late Professor G. F. H. Markoe. There had been no announcement of the engagement and there was no announcement of the marriage. Friends of both the bride and groom are treated to a surprise.

Mr. Dillaway is in his sixty-ninth year and his bride is twenty years his junior. She is a remarkably handsome woman appearing much younger than her years would tell. She is described as very dignified, very refined, with a wealth of raven hair and deep brown eyes.

Directly following his marriage Mr. Dillaway announced to the clerks in his office that he was going on a honeymoon. The surprise in the business circles that he frequents was followed by a shower of congratulations, and then Mr. and Mrs. Dillaway went to The Weirs, N. H., where they are now sojourning on the shores of Lake Winnepesaukee.

Links 'n the Romance.

The chain of events that led up to the marriage includes a love story of two continents. Mrs. Markoe is a daughter of the late Lord Joseph Moore, owner of large estates in rural England. Lord Joseph planned that his daughter should have all the advantages of education to be found in the Old World, and so, when she had finished her studies in the home schools, she was sent to France. Here she delved deep in the research of art and letters.

Her cousin, Elizabeth Phillips, had gone to America and was the bride of Henry G. Dillaway, a rising young man who was making headway in business. She had heard much of the advantages of the New World, and when her father died she made up her mind to make her home in the United States.

Then followed her marriage to G. F. H. Markoe, a student of pharmacy. Her husband purchased a drug store on Dudley street, Roxbury, and built up a profitable business. He became a lecturer of note and was considered one of the most widely versed men on subjects pertaining to pharmacy in the country. He served as a lecturer at Harvard and was instrumental in the establishment of the Boston School of Pharmacy. Ten years ago he died, leaving a daughter, Miss Lloyd Markoe.

Mrs. Markoe continued to live in Roxbury. Five years later she decided to engage in some occupation where she could have an opportunity to study life and living, and so she accepted a position as superintendent of the South End Industrial School, a position which she resigned shortly before her marriage.

Dillaways Live Apart.

Mrs. Markoe's cousin, who was several years her senior, separated from her husband sixteen years after their marriage. She went to live in Switzerland, and for the past twenty-five years she has resided there.

Last January Mr. Dillaway sued for divorce and a decree nisi was granted him in the Superior Court of Suffolk County on January 8 of this year. In the decree his wife was given six months, ending July 9, in which to file objections. She made no reply to the action of the court and the divorce became absolute.

Mr. Dillaway was much interested in his cousin-in-law. Of late years it was noticeable that he was more attentive, but the idea that he had any intentions of marrying was far from the minds of the friends of both.

With Mrs. Markoe he quietly began to make preparation for a wedding. The date was kept secret. A few people know that Mr. Dillaway was fitting out a pretty home in Allston, but it was only a very few.

At noon on Tuesday Mr. Dillaway and Mrs. Markoe, accompanied by the latter's daughter, Miss Lloyd, and Mr. and Mrs. William Howell Reed, of Commonwealth avenue, drove to the church, where they were made one by the Rev. Samuel A. Eliot.

HEAT WAVE TEMPERED BY COOLING WIND

Some Relief From Oppressive Conditions Promised in To-day's Forecast.

BREEZE DISPELS THE FOG

There is little danger to-day of prostrations from the heat, so far as present conditions are concerned. Prostrations which do occur will be the result of the scorching weather which has just passed, for the time being. The humidity is 90 per cent, but is not felt severely on account of the light but cool northeast wind.

According to the weather bureau here, the heat will not be intense to-day. If the mercury approaches 80 degrees, or mounts one or two degrees above, that will likely be the maximum.

The sun, getting a chance to shine through the light but cool northeast breeze, began to dissipate the fogs which had hung over the harbor from an early hour last evening. Gradually at first, but as the morning wore away more rapidly, the banks of vapor were dissipated, and pilots and sailing masters were able to find where they were.

Anxiety in Fog.

Fog, damp, depressing and thick gathered in the harbor early last evening and caused no end of anxiety on the part of crews of vessels, both sail and steam, and to the hundreds of passengers aboard the craft. Railroad trains and electric cars were likewise hindered in making schedule time.

The steamer Mayflower of the Nantasket Beach line went aground on [illegible] and on her first trip up from Nantasket to-day with 500 passengers aboard.

The boat was nosing along cautiously in the fog but, before the lookout could give warning, she shoved her forefoot into the soft sand of the island shore and stuck. The passengers had to be quartered astern to lift the bow of the boat up before the steamer's engines could back her off from the shoal. She made the Rowe's wharf berth forty-five minutes late.

On the way up the passengers spied a fishing schooner aground on Castle Island.

The General Lincoln, the last boat up from Nantasket Beach, which was due to arrive at about midnight, reached her dock at Rowe's Wharf at 3 a. m. to-day. She was crowded with men, women and children, and as the boat went creeping along up the harbor through the fog banks, there was some excitement among the women passengers, anxiety among the men and much crying among the children. Mrs. Emily Nisman, of Roslindale, one of the passengers, suffered an attack of hysteria as a result of the general uneasiness among the passengers. She was treated by Dr. Leahy, a member of the Relief Hospital staff, who was aboard, and sent to her home when the vessel reached Boston.

Several narrow escapes from collisions with vessels at anchor in the harbor were reported by ferryboat captains early today. An East Boston ferryboat which was coming across the harbor at 5.45 a. m. succeeded in backing away from a private yacht anchored off Rowe's wharf. Somewhere in the interior of the yacht, the members of its crew declared, they were ringing a fog bell, but it could not be heard, and the captain of the ferryboat came within a few feet of sending some parts of the expensive vessel to Davy Jones's locker.

WANT MARRIAGE FEE RETURNED

Having changed their minds about being made man and wife, after securing the license and paying the fee of $1 for it, Edward Wing, a travelling salesman of Boston, and Maude C. Damon, daughter of James A. Damon, a farmer near Boston, returned to the clerk at the Marriage Bureau in Providence, R. I., yesterday and asked if they could not have their money back.

There was nothing coming back, however, for the clerk declared rebates on marriage licenses didn't go, and the couple returned to Boston, unwedded. They would not tell why they changed their minds so suddenly.

HUSBAND SHOOTS WIFE THINKING HER BURGLAR

LOWELL, Aug. 9.—Awakened suddenly from a sound sleep during the night by the noise of an overturning chair, Samuel C. Ashton immediately had visions of burglars and, grabbing a pistol from under his pillow, fired two shots at a shadowy form in the hallway. A woman's scream and a hasty investigation revealed to the horrified man that he had shot his wife through the head.

Doctors were called and the unfortunate woman conveyed to the Lowell Hospital. It was first thought that she would not live, but the bullet was finally found after much probing and the hospital authorities report to-day that the victim has a fair chance of recovery.

Her husband is almost distracted with grief. According to his story, he and Mrs. Ashton had been discussing the numerous burglaries perpetrated in the neighborhood recently when they retired that night.

During the night Mrs. Ashton awoke. Remembering that the kitchen door had been left open she arose to close it without awakening her husband. Returning to bed she came in contact with the chair. The burglar talk was fresh in Mr. Ashton's mind and in his half asleep condition grabbed the pistol and, rushing to the hall, blazed away before he realized what he was about. When he lighted a lamp he discovered that it was his wife who was shot.

The bullet that took effect entered her head and lodged in the brain just behind the right ear.

STANDARD OIL INDICTED IN REBATE CASES

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Federal authorities are now preparing for speedy trial of the Standard Oil Company, against which the grand jury yesterday found an indictment for receiving rebates. Word has been received for Attorney-General Moody that the government is to lose no time now in the further conduct of the case before the courts.

The indictment came as a surprise, inasmuch as the grand jury had just begun the investigation to-day. The Standard Oil Company is the only defendant, no officials of the company and no railroad companies or officials being named.

May Be Fined $380,000.

This is the case investigated by the grand jury in Cleveland, where it was found that the grand jury had no jurisdiction. The testimony taken there was transferred to Chicago and the documents in evidence were identified by witnesses who testified in Cleveland.

The indictment contains nineteen counts, each count constituting a separate charge. The true bills come under the Elkins law, which provides a fine of from $1,000 to $20,000 for each violation. Under this indictment, should the Government procure a conviction on the trial of the issues, a fine of $380,000 as a maximum under the Elkins law may be assessed.

Escaped Storage Charge.

The indictment alleges that by a system of granting the Standard Oil Company certain concessions the oil company benefited to the extent of $8,506.72 during a period from August, 1903, to February, 1905. The indictment, as explained by the government's attorneys, means that in nineteen instances certain consignments of oil for the Standard Oil Company were stored by the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railroad Company and that the railroad received no payment of 5 cents per ton per day from the oil company for such storage, but that its competitors were compelled to pay this amount.

SHAM BATTLE FATAL.

AUSTIN, Tex., Aug. 9.—In some unknown manner a few regulation bullets were supplied instead of blank cartridges to soldiers for the manoeuvres at Camp Mabry, and as a result Jesse Cantiss of Fort Worth, attached to Troop K of the First Cavalry, U. S. A., was fatally shot.

GIRL OF 14 SUES MARRIED MAN FOR $5,000

Special to the Boston American.

SOUTH SWANSEA, Aug. 9.—Asking $5,000 from George W. Simmons, thirty five years old, and father of six children, for "hugging, kissing and pulling her hair," fourteen-year-old Anna Irene Sherman has, through her father, to-day entered suit in the Taunton court.

Simmons denies the girl's story. The girl's father, Charles Sherman, a farmer here, declares that he will fight the matter out in the court and see to it that his daughter receives proper redress. Simmons is one of the best known citizens in the town. He is a butcher, and is considered to be in fairly good financial circumstances.

Girl Looks 17 Years Old.

Anna Irene Sherman is a pretty girl and appears to be at least sixteen or seventeen years old. She is employed during the day as a housemaid for an elderly man who lives two miles from her home. Late on the afternoon of July 5 she started home from her employer's house. Simmons, who travels about the country, buying up stock and selling meat from his wagon, happened along the road. He knew the girl and asked her if she did not want to ride home. She accepted the invitation and went with him.

She declares in her complaint that no sooner had they started off than Simmons began hugging and kissing her, and suggested that instead of taking the main road they drive over the path through the woods. The girl says she tried to jump out of the team, but that Simmons grabbed her by the hair and held her.

When they reached the Sherman house the girl's mother was waiting in the roadway for her, and as the girl jumped out of the team with tears in her eyes, the mother asked Simmons for an explanation, but it is alleged that he drove off without saying a word.

The girl's father hitched up his team and together with his daughter drove off to find Simmons. They located him at his home a mile away.

Simmons denies that there is any truth in the matter. He declares that his only intention in asking the girl to ride was to save her the long walk home over the lonely road. He is indignant at the girl's allegations, and says he is anxious to have the matter come into court at once that he may prove his innocence.

LITTLEFIELD FORMS "LABOR" LEAGUE TO AVERT HIS DEFEAT

Attempts Old Dodge of Splitting Labor Vote in Maine Campaign to Save Himself.

LEWISTON, Me., Aug. 9.—Congressman Charles E. Littlefield, one of the most active agent of the Trust and Government by injunction interests in Congress, sees the "handwriting on the wall." It spells defeat and is being written by the hand of organized labor. The determination which is being shown by members of labor unions all over the country to organize politically and drive from public life the men who have fought in legislative halls against the welfare of working men is nowhere stronger than in the Second Congressional District of Maine. It is the most serious menace to his political success that Littlefield has ever faced.

In his district to-day there is rearing high above him the crest of the political wave which is sweeping the country. It is the tidal wave of united action at the polls by organized labor. Union men in the Second District are taking the advice so often given in the editorial columns of the BOSTON AMERICAN to protest by their votes against the election to public office of men who are the tools of public service or other oppressive corporations. There are other influences tending toward Littlefield's defeat, but the strongest of all is the workingman's vote.

His Own "League."

In a desperate attempt to stem the tide, Littlefield is trying to start a back fire by organizing a "labor" party of his own. It is called the Independent Labor League and began operations in Knox county, where Littlefield lives. It was organized by Charles Harriman.

Littlefield hopes to extend the League all through the five counties of his district and to use it to deceive workingmen as to the real issue. He hopes to split the weighty influence of organized labor by dividing its vote.

The Harriman league held district and county conventions for Knox county in Rockland on Monday and nominated a full ticket. A significant feature of the latter is the fact that Frank B. Miller of Rockland, candidate for registrar of deeds, Merritt A. Johnson of Rockland, candidate for country attorney and Nathan B. Tolman of Warren, candidate for county commissioner, are all on the straight Republican ticket. That discloses the whole movement as a Republican side show, aside from the fact that the convention indorsed Littlefield for Congress. Although the so-called labor men favorable to the re-election of Littlefield, who advocates using court injunctions as strike breakers, have talked much about "outsiders" coming into Maine to interfere in local elections, the Harriman league imported a man from Baltimore to fight President Gompers on the stump. This Maryland ally of Littlefield is Colonel M. M. Mulhall. Maine labor leaders had not heard of him before he made a speech in the Rockland convention.

Attacks Mr. Gompers.

Colonel Mulhall devoted himself to attacking the head of the American Federation of Labor, who is coming to Maine later in the month to take a personal hand in aiding in the defeat of Littlefield. President Gompers is expected to relate on the stump Littlefield's Congressional labor record. The latter does not seem disposed to discuss it in detail and handles the subject, when it is forced upon him, in a professional way. He is an able lawyer. He says he has proven himself a friend of the workingman by what he did in the Maine Legislature.

"I was speaker," he said, "when the ten-hour law was passed and appointed the first labor committee ever appointed in that body."

This pointing to a local record by the Congressman has but very little weight with the labor people in view of what is known about his Washington record for work against the wage earners as an organized class. The Congressman is accused by local labor leaders as having viciously and persistently opposed in Congress all labor measures and of having been the uncompromising foe to them, both in committee and on the floor.

Cannot Draw Party Line.

All the members of labor unions in this district are not Democrats. The labor element here is largely Republican as well, and when fought on the ground of his trust affiliations, Littlefield cannot draw any party line. The Harriman league was organized to influence particularly the independent and the Republican labor vote. That is why the Baltimore importation accused President Gompers of Democracy.

There are many business men and others in the Second District who have always been Republican, but are opposed to Littlefield because it is believed that he has embarrassed President Roosevelt by opposition to administration measures. The report has spread broadcast that Littlefield is doomed to defeat here, and that is the chief reason why there is a disposition in national party councils to send into this district some of the strongest leaders in the United States.

The Maine election will be held on September 10, and there is a dread of the effect Littlefield's defeat at that early date will have upon Congressional battles elsewhere to be settled at the polls in November. That there should be talk of sending Speaker Cannon and others of his standing here to aid Littlefield is taken all over the Second District as an indication that the Congressman in realization of the situation has appealed to Washington for aid.

The trust interests throughout the district are doing all they can in his behalf. The trouble in Republican ranks in Oxford County to-day, another phase of the situation working against the Congressman, is due to the work the trusts did there two years ago to renominate him. He was opposed as a candidate then by John F. Swasey, one of the most popular Republicans in Oxford. Swasey's friends say that he would have had the Oxford delegation but for trust influence used in behalf of Littlefield there. What Swasey and his friends will do at the polls is causing the Littlefield campaign management some uneasiness. Littlefield was asked by a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter:

"Have you come to any understanding with Mr. Swasey?"

"No," replied Littlefield, "it has not been necessary."

"Do you expect Mr. Swasey to suport you?"

"I expect," said Littlefield, "that he will do his duty like any other good Republican."

Friends of Littlefield admit that he is facing the hardest political battle in his career, and there has never been a time in the history of the district when the Democrats were so confident of success. They have sent reports to Washington which caused Colonel Charles Edwards, secretary of the Democratic congressional committee, to make the statement:

Says Littlefield Is Beaten.

"The labor situation in his district indicates that Littlefield is beaten, and I have authoritative information that indicates not only that, but that he and his friends know it."

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL BOSTON, MASS. 96

Arrangements looking toward the naturalization of 2,000 members in Boston and vicinity were made at last night's meeting of the executive committee of the Boston Central Wage Earners' Club. This step was brought about by requests from members of unions who applied for membership in the club who, when asked if they had a vote, replied that although they had been in the country for a number of years they had never been asked by either party to take out papers.

A personal house-to-house canvass will be made by the committees in the several wards. President Potts states that there are about 6,000 more members of unions throughout the State who are not citizens, and the matter will be brought before the next convention of the club, which will be held in Wells Memorial Hall next Tuesday.

At least 150 more applications for membership were received at last night's meeting, and very favorable reports were received from the various ward committees. It was reported that branches had been formed in Wards 1 and 13. The officers of the Ward 1 branch are: President, A. A. McCormick; secretary, C. H. Morrison; financial secretary, Edward Gates; treasurer, J. H. Doyle. Following are the officers of the Ward 13 branch, which will have headquarters at No. 143 Sixth street: President, Francis H. Hughes; treasurer, Cornelius Kenneally; secretary, Frank A. Cox.

A committee was appointed to secure a list of voters from the election commissioners. To-morrow night's meeting of the club has been postponed until Friday, Aug. 17, on account of the special meeting of the Central Labor Union.

C. L. U. SPECIAL MEETING.

A special meeting of the Central Labor Union has been called for to-morrow night at Wells Memorial Hall to act on important matters relative to the Labor Day parade. This action was the result of a joint meeting of the Central Labor Union and the Building Trades Section of the C. L. U. last night.

It was decided that the parade be in three divisions, the Central Labor Union division, with the right of line; the building trades section of the Central Labor Union as the second division, and District Assembly No. 30, K. of L., original, the third division.

Martin T. Joyce, president of the Central Labor Union, will be chief marshal. His staff will consist of a chief of staff, an aide-de-camp and nine aids, three from the organizations of each of the three divisions.

INDORSE CAP MAKERS' LABEL.

The label of Cloth Hat and Cap Makers' Union was indorsed by Electrical Workers' Union No. 103 last night after an address by New England Organizer Julius Friedman. H. A. Seyler and David Gray were elected to fill vacancies on the executive board, and H. A. Seyler was also chosen delegate to the Central Labor Union. Four candidates were initiated.

LABOR NOTES.

The executive board of District Assembly No. 30, K. of L., original, will meet to-night at Roughan building, Charlestown, to complete arrangements for the Labor Day parade.

F. A. Cox has been elected by Branch No. 4 of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners as its representative to the Frank K. Foster testimonial banquet.

Waltham Central Labor Union will hold a mass meeting to-night in K. of C. Hall, Main street, in behalf of the Waltham bleachery and dyehouse workers who have been on strike for several months. Among the speakers will be James Duncan, first vice-president of the A. F. of L.; Thomas F. Tracy, chairman of the A. F. of L. political campaign, and Henry Abrahams, secretary of the Boston Central Labor Union.

Barbers' Union No. 182 expects to have 800 men in line in the Labor Day parade. A banquet will be held in Union Park Hall immediately after the parade.

BLESSING FROM PIUS X. GIVEN TO ABSTAINERS

Message from Rome Read at the Annual Session in Providence.

REPORTS SHOW PROGRESS

Special to the Boston American.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Aug. 9.—The afternoon session of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America, held in Infantry Hall yesterday, was devoted mostly to general business. The Right Rev. Regis Canevin, president, read a letter from His Holiness Pope Pius X and made his annual address.

First Vice-President [illegible] gave a resume of the work of the Boston Union. Mrs. Leonora M. Lake, the third vice-president, spoke for the societies in her jurisdiction, all of which showed increased interest in the cause of total abstinence.

The secretary's report showed an increase of two new unions and the admittance of sixty-nine separate societies.

Rev. Fr. Roche of [illegible] made an appeal for funds for Catholic missions. The convention then adjourned until to-day's session.

Pope Pius's blessing to the convention, read by Father [illegible] was in part as follows:

"To Our Venerable Brother Francis Regis,
Bishop of Pittsburg, President of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America:

"Venerable Brother, Health and apostolic benediction. We learn with pleasure that the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America is to hold a convention in the city of Providence. Following the example of our predecessors, and especially the latest among them, to whom there seems to be no greater enemy of the teachings and commands of Christ than the abuse of strong drink, we heartily approve the work of the union and congratulate them in this commendable assemblage, because they are really our associates and helpers in persuading men to practice one of the principal Christian virtues—temperance.

"Moreover, while we are expressing our cordial wishes for the success of the convention, we desire to encourage the efforts of the union by a tender of spiritual gifts, and, for this reason, we confirm the privileges accorded the union by Leo XIII., of happy memory.

"It is our hope that by conferring such abundant favors not only bishops, priests, and men of religious orders, but also the rest of the faithful, may resolve to bear witness to their regard for the union and become members of it; and that the evidence of our approval may move them to do this we most cordially in the Lord, as a presage of heavenly rewards and as a pledge of our good will, bestow on you and on all who have joined or will join the union, our apostolic blessing.

"Given at Rome, at St. Peter's, on the tenth day of July in the year nineteen hundred and six, the third year of our pontificate.
PIUS X."

NOW YOU EE IT, NOW YOU DON'T
Size of Signs Gauges Wishes of 'L'

Placards Hang in Cars Where Straphangers Can't Help Seeing Them.

"Please," says the "L" to the passenjare,
"Please chip a nickel for a five-cent fare.
Over a nickel is bother, you see;
Makes more work for the Companee.
Therefore, please, Mr. Passenjare,
Please chip a nickel for a five-cent fare."
—Ballad of the Straphangers.

What's the difference between a sign? It all depends upon who is being benefited by it, the Boston Elevated Railway Company or the unterrified straphanger.

NOTHING ELSE IN SIGHT BUT "PLEASE PAY."

NOTICE
A NOTICE FOR THE COMPANY'S BENEFIT

Passengers Will Notice That Company Is Not Joking.

That Little Sign Telling How to Get a Transfer.

The long-suffering patrons of the Boston "L" are now confronted by a new sign, as follows:

TO PASSENGERS.

Please pay single fare with a five-cent piece.

To avoid errors in change, passengers are requested, and Conductors are required, to name the denomination of any bill or coin exceeding five cents in value tendered for fare.

If the wicked generation of Bible times which sought for a sign and couldn't get it had lived to-day, it would have found one sign at least. It couldn't have missed it. And thereby hangs a tale of corporation convenience.

Posts a Small Placard.

Usually when the "L" condescends to tell the straphangers anything, it posts it up a placard in dinky little lettering giving the necessary information.

But, when the "L" had something it wanted the straphanger to read for the convenience of the COMPANY, like this new sign, that was a different proposition. It printed it in big letters and hung it square across the top of the car in two double-faced frames, making four signs in all.

Nothing Else in Sight.

When the straphanger has boarded his car he is struck by the signs as though he had been hit with a piece of lead pipe. They stare at him from every viewpoint. When he opens his paper he finds himself reading those notices instead of the news. Else some unreasonable common person might rise up and kick. So the "L" stuck in a small-letter placard on the side of the car devoted to advertising space, or hangs small slips on a string and lets you "take one." When it decided that a straphanger had to ask for a transfer when he paid his fare, it kindly allowed that the straphanger ought to know it.

Plastered on the side of the car, up at the top, this sign can easily be read if a straphanger has a neck built on the lines of a corkscrew, with a ball and socket joint every two inches to enable him to twist his head up at an angle. Or, if a man had a removable head, he could read those signs.

Puts Up Modest Sign.

The sightless fish in the Stygian darkness of the Mammoth cave of Kentucky could easily hold it up at arm's length and then read the sign comfortably.

But as this sign is merely for the convenience of the straphanger, it doesn't concern the "L" much whether the sign is read or not. And it gives the "L" more chances to refuse transfers, which are a wicked and sinful device, anyway.

Then, when the "L" allowed that a straphanger could take two children under five years free of charge, providing they didn't take up any seats, but were held in the lap or in the vest pocket, or, peradventure, carried in a handbag, the "L" put up another sign in an equally unobtrusive manner.

They permeate the entire visual field from the foreground, through the middle distance, out to the horizon and over the other side.

They are as omnipresent as mosquitoes in the Fenway and as irritating as the itch.

If any brute of a straphanger chances to be without a nickel and gives the conductor a dime it makes him feel—and properly so—like a degenerate. As Portia might have said:

"The man who hath no nickel in his jeans,
Nor is not moved by this polite appeal,
Is fit for corporations' deepest curse.
He is not meant for riding on a trolley
Nor hanging by the supple leather strap.
Take no such man as passenger."

It required [illegible] strength to haul in his line [illegible] came a bicycle. The wheel was one which had been stolen a week before and evidently had been thrown into the creek by the thief.

SHOT IN THIGH, REFUSES TO EAT

ORANGE, Aug. 9.—Peter C. Wescott, who was shot by Special Policeman George Hoyt while trying to escape, refuses to eat, and it is thought he is trying to starve to death. Wescott shuts his mouth and shakes his head when food is brought him.

DOWIE MUST PAY FOR REVIVAL DEBT

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—The decision on an appeal made by John Alexander Dowie from a judgment of the Superior Court has been handed down ordering him to pay to Attorney Hugh Craig $1,764.90, with interest from 1888. The judgment of the lower court was affirmed. Craig advanced money for Dowie to conduct a revival meeting.

LORD BERESFORD TO QUIT COMMAND

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Dispatches from Malta say that Vice-Admiral Lord Charles Beresford is about to resign the command of the Mediterranean fleet and that Rear Admiral Sir Assheton Curzon-Rowe will probably succeed him. The paper suggests that Lord Beresford's resignation is owing to his disapproval of the recent policy of the Admiralty, which, among other things, reduced the importance of the Mediterranean fleet.

JILTED GIRL GAVE POISON?

Special to the Boston American.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 9.—Suffering from poisoned candy, which he declared had been given to him by a young woman he had jilted, Peter Souzon, of No. 720 South Second street, Philadelphia, was hurried to the city hospital here yesterday, barely in time to save his life. He steadily refused to give the police the name of the woman.

Souzon was spending the Summer at the Hotel Alvion. At another hotel was his fiancee, Miss Dorothy Goldberg, of Philadelphia. According to Souzon's story Miss Goldberg left him for a few minutes in a pavilion while she went to get some photographs.

While she was gone his former sweetheart approached and offered him candy from a box of bonbons. Then she bade him an affectionate good-bye and passed on. He ate two of the candies and was instantly seized with violent cramps. A policeman hurried him to the hospital. To add to the mystery, Miss Goldberg has disappeared.

BE QUIET, HIS IS SALEM

LEM. Aug. 9.—Hereafter when ex-on parties go through Salem, they keep quiet. No more will fishhorns, or cries of "What's the matter with ——" resound through the night, for the police have been instructed to board cars and stop such noises. Hospital authorities, physicians and citizens who desire sleep have complained of the noises.

JOHN D., WIG AND ALL, IN OIL

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—John D. Rockefeller is having his portrait painted with his wig on. The famous wig of the Standard Oil magnate has been photographed and snapped many times in the past few months, but it is now being done in OIL for the first time.

The portrait, which is being done by Norval H. Busey, is now nearly completed, and the artist is only waiting for Mr. Rockefeller to get out of the toils of Ohio justice and return and give him two more sittings.

Mr. Rockefeller's "posing" was done in Artist Busey's studio, No. 27 West Sixty-seventh street, shortly before the oil trust magnate left for France.

EVELYN NESBIT THAW TO BE PITIED IN HER TROUBLE, SAYS DOROTHY DIX

"Let Those Who Could Resist Her Temptation Cast First Stone," Says Woman Author.

Youth and Love of Luxury Blamed for Disasters She Has Caused Herself and Others.

By Dorothy Dix.

> ## Dorothy Dix Says of Young Wife of Thaw:
>
> She is not positively wicked, because she does not premeditatively desire to harm any one. She is only negatively so.
>
> She loved pleasure, and pretty clothes, and softness and luxury, and—
>
> And the tempter came. What does it matter whether it was Stanford White or another?
>
> To be very beautiful and very poor, and only seventeen years old, and to have your heart's desire of all that money buys offered you—let those who would have had the wisdom and the strength to resist cast the first stone.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Every day at 11:45 o'clock an automobile drives swiftly up to the side door of a big office building on lower Broadway and a slight young woman, closely veiled, jumps hurriedly out and almost runs through the marble-lined foyer to the elevator. She is a quietly and unobtrusively dressed little woman, with no mark of fashion or wealth upon her clothes, yet as she passes every eye is turned upon her and a whisper as sibilant as the hiss of a snake runs around the room:

"That is Evelyn Nesbit—Harry Thaw's wife—going to confer with her attorney, Clifford Hartridge."

For there is no doubt that so far as the interest of the general public is concerned in the Thaw affair, it is chiefly in the woman who, directly or indirectly, is responsible for the crime. Poor Harry Thaw in the Tombs, insolently sure that there is nothing money cannot buy, and that a jury couldn't be so disrespectful to weath as to really punish a man as rich as he is; the poor mother, all of whose millions have not been able to save her from a heart broken over a wayward son, just like any other mother's, are merely the background of the picture out of which looks the face of the woman whose beauty changed her from an obscure little provincial girl, in cheap home-made frocks, to one of the gorgeous butterflies in silks and diamonds that flutter along the great White Way, and finally landed her, apparently the darling of the gods, secure and safe as the lawfully wedded wife of a young millionaire.

Began With a Romance.

The story of Evelyn Nesbit was romantic to start with, with an unusual climax, even if it had ended, as far as the world knew, with her marrying Thaw and passing into the safe obscurity of Pittsburg domesticity, but all that went before was but the preface to the play.

The real drama began when Thaw, acting from what unknown motive or on what untold provocation, shot down Stanford White for her sake, and thus pushed her once more into the middle of the stage and turned the limelight of speculation on the personality and character of one who had so strange and baleful an influence upon the fortunes of two men.

To understand a woman you must begin with her forbears, since every woman is so completely the result of her inheritance and environment. In Evelyn Nesbit's parentage and home you find the keynote to all that she is and has done. Weakness, lack of stamina, a Micawber-like belief that everything would turn out all right in the end if you didn't look at the means too closely are the qualities that were born in her blood and drawn in with her mother's milk. It is what makes men failures and women shiftless.

Add to these great and exceeding beauty in a young girl. Give her vanity, a sensuous love of all soft and easy things—good eating, good drinking, good clothes, good times—and put against it poverty, and you have a combination of characteristics that make a woman good or bad according to her temptation. There are millions of women in the world like that. They are perfectly respectable and types of virtue because they are rich, or ugly, or live in the country a hundred miles from a city.

In World's Beauty Market.

Evelyn Nesbit was poor and she was beautiful, and she came to the world's great market place of beauty, and she lacked the strength that would make her go hungry, and shabby, and footsore, and lonely when fascinating men offered her silks, and jewels, and automobiles, and all the glitter and gaiety that youth craves so passionately. One way was so easy and the other so hard.

And she had never been used to seeing people take the hard road when the pleasanter path invited. She had never been brought up with any Spartan ideas of doing right because it was right. Her father and mother were not bad. Far from it. They were only what old fashioned New England folks call "slack." The father was a lawyer—a fairly good one, it is said, if only he would have attended to business, but he was one of the easy going souls who never let business interfere with enjoyment. He was fond of sports, particularly of bicycling, and he was a famous amateur racer. Generous, too, with always a wheel to lend to anybody who wanted one.

In the intervals, when there were no races on, and he was not making century runs, he attended to what law practice came his way. Naturally it wasn't much, and the family lived always in the demoralizing atmosphere of staving off the bill collector with fair words and specious promises. Then Mr. Nesbit died, leaving his family penniless.

No Deliberate Plan in Life.

Mrs. Nesbit is of much the same character as her husband was. She is a very pretty woman—the girl gets her looks from her mother and resembles her closely—but not very clever, or worldly wise, even at this time of day, and exceedingly credulous and optimistic. She is the kind of mother who wants her children to be happy, to be prettily clothed and to have their desires. She would not want them to do wrong but she would not look too closely at the reasoning that reaped golden results.

After Mr. Nesbit died, Mrs. Nesbit sent her little boy to his grandmother's, and she and Evelyn went to Philadelphia, two forlorn and ignorant and unsophisticated soldiers of fortune as ever attacked an unknown world. The girl was fifteen, and already budding into wondrous beauty that soon attracted the attention of artists and photographers, and she got engagements almost at once to pose as a model. It is significant of the mother's lack of plan that this, the real beginning of Evelyn's career, was a matter of accident. She did not appreciate the girl's beauty. She did not know that money could be earned by posing for pictures. Other people arranged it all for her, and she accepted what they said, as she has done about everything else in her existence.

Was a Devoted Mother.

Notwithstanding what the girl earned—a mere pittance—they were very poor—so poor that Mrs. Nesbit cut up the sheets she had brought from their little Pittsburg home and made underclothes for herself and Evelyn, and fashioned her dresses out of two colored bedspreads; but she was a devoted mother and chaperoned the girl far more rigorously than is customary in our free and easy American society. She always went with her to the studios where she posed, and in the evening never permitted Evelyn to go trolley riding or participate in the other diversions of the young girls and boys unless some responsible married woman was along.

Then, the art field of Philadelphia being a limited field for a model, the two women came to New York with letters of introduction to artists, hoping to better their condition. It seems certain that up to the moment of arriving here Evelyn Nesbit was an innocent, guileless little girl, but she had had a glimpse of the great world. She had learned the fairy tales of girls no better looking than herself who got positions in the chorus and in a single night were transformed from hard-working little drudges into twinkling stars, and she was wild to go upon the stage and try her luck.

Then, too, they were very poor. She and her mother lived in a shabby little dreary flat, and her mother took in sewing and she posed and posed until she was ready to drop with fatigue, and with it all they barely kept the wolf from the door. And she was not a worker, by temperament or inheritance. She loved pleasure, and pretty clothes, and softness and luxury, and—

Head Turned by Flattery.

And the tempter came. What does it matter whether it was Stanford White or another? He turned the girl's head with flattery. He dazzled her with luxury. He put her in the way of realizing her ambition. He argued down her poor, little, weak conscientious scruples. He made them seem ridiculous, banal, provincial, and she was so young and she so hungered and thirsted for what he could give her, and—and it all happened as it has happened millions of times before.

The weakness that made Evelyn Nesbit choose a life of luxury rather than one of labor, and that made her trust to getting along on the stage to some man's favor rather than her own effort, is the salient point in her character. She is not positively wicked, because she does not premeditatedly desire to harm anyone. She is only negatively so. She is not far-seeing. She does not reason out results. She acts from impulse, always doing the easy, self indulgent thing, and is amazed when she finds she has precipitated an avalanche of trouble upon herself and all connected with her.

You may see this in her folly at not putting her past behind her when she married Thaw, and had an opportunity to wipe out the black score against her. If she had been a woman of strong character she would never have darkened again the doors of the places that had known her only too well, but as the flame draws the moth the white lights of Broadway drew her back to her old haunts, to where she would meet old companions, and renew old associations, and the result was inevitable. The moth went too near the flame once too often, and its foolish little wings were singed so that it will probably never flutter again.

This is pre-eminently what Evelyn Nesbit Thaw is—a butterfly woman, a pretty, gay, unthinking creature, made to float down, with the soft south winds of life, not to buffet its icy northern blasts. The pity of it is that men will chase butterflies, and that when they come to grief, some deep-souled woman must bear the grief and the agony of it as Mrs. White and Harry Thaw's mother are bearing this.

But before we judge Evelyn Nesbit let us consider her temptation. To be very beautiful, and very poor, and only seventeen years old, and to have your heart's desire of all that money buys offered you—let those who would have had the wisdom and the strength to resist cast the first stone.

STRIKE MEN CALLED FROM NEW BEDFORD

William Ward and 35 Men Leave for New York; Replaced by Union Men.

CAR MEN STILL FIGHTING

Special to the Boston American.

NEW BEDFORD, Aug. 9.—William Ward, chief strike-breaker, and his men, numbering thirty-three, left the city early to-day for New York. A few of the strike-breakers who have obtained regular employment remain in the city. Many cars are being run by members of the Street Railway Men's Union, who have returned to work, and outsiders whom the company has hired. The company claims that seventy members of the union have returned to work. The union officials deny these figures.

They say that 110 men answered the union roll-call last night.

Of the 239 men who went out on strike a number, both sides agree, have returned to work, while others have found employment elsewhere.

District Organizer Fitzgerald is on the scene to-day, and will remain here directing the efforts of the union men in trying to win the long fight which they admit is before them.

MUGGSY M'GRAW MAY BUY NEW HAVEN TEAM

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 9.—Manager John J. McGraw of the New York National League baseball team has secured an option on the New Haven team of the Connecticut League and may take over the entire franchise and pay $10,000 for it at the end of the present season. This announcement was made last night by Manager and Owner C. J. Danaher of the New Haven club, who has recently been in communication with McGraw and has sold him Burke, the New Haven outfielder, and Hannifin, the infielder, for a goodly sum of money, stated variously at from $2,000 to $5,000.

It is stated by Mr. Danaher, according to a local authority, that Manager McGraw is after a minor league team where he can make a training school for National League players for the New York club. Mr. Danaher bought the local franchise two years ago for $2,000 and last year made a fizzle of the management and tried to sell it this Spring for $10,000. The team has been doing pretty well this season under the management of Billy Hayward, the captain and third baseman, and though local capitalists, who have negotiated for the purchase, could not see $10,000 value in it, it seems to look that good to the New Yorker.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 9.—The Naps' poor showing, combined with internal dissensions, is a predicament that is likely to prove serious unless something is done soon by the club owners. Lajoie, piqued by managerial worries and cares, is suffering from nervousness, and his batting slump is due directly to not only the mishaps that have befallen the team, but to the resultant troubles. He feels that he is not entirely to blame for the team's poor work, inasmuch as he is not vested with the authority generally bestowed upon a manager. Negotiations for new players are being made without his knowledge, and orders that are in direct opposition to his views constantly come from the office regarding the running of the team. It is feared that unless conditions are changed Lajoie will either step out or there will be a shakeup in the business management.

Dinneen and Hess will clash in to-day's game, the final of the season. Manager Collins thought last night that his prospects for taking it were bright. Grimshaw's return to the game strengthens the team work, and Collins is satisfied that the patriarchs will go forward with a jump. Their work yesterday certainly was of the championship variety, and reminded the spectators of the days when the Boston Americans were the real champions.

The Rathskellers, as the Americans have been dubbed, took the Naps into camp twice without much exertion by the scores of 3 to 1 and 1 to 0. At times they played rings around them. The Naps lost the first through their failure to solve Young. He pitched an excellent game and then walked through the grounds to the shower bath. He was fondly and fittingly applauded. Harris in the second game pitched one of the best games ever seen here.

Young Mr. Hoey was a factor in both games, his single in the first scoring two runs and giving his team a lead that the Naps could not overcome and two of his grand running catches in the second dissipating Cleveland's chances to tie the score.

PLANNING TO HOLD AUTO SHOWS IN DECEMBER

BY J. C. KERRISON.

As was predicted by the BOSTON AMERICAN, the Automobile Club of America and the American Motor Car Manufacturers' Association have started the ball a-rolling for early automobile shows. Instead of waiting until the middle of January, this combination has determined to hold its show, generally known as the independent, the first week in December, some seven weeks prior to the Madison Square exhibit. In the past there has been a strong desire on the part of certain of the leading manufacturers to hold early shows, in order that they might carry the show circuit along and bring it to a finish in season to permit of their giving their undivided attention to early sales and deliveries. It is believed that by the date of the show all intended exhibitors will have their 1907 cars sufficiently advanced so that models of each can be shown.

This announcement on the part of the A. C. A. and the A. M. C. M. A. is taken as indicating a desire on the part of the independent association to hold a series of motor exhibits in the leading cities, say New York, Chicago, Buffalo, Philadelphia and Boston, several weeks prior to the date of the holding of the shows in these cities which heretofore have been mixed, so far as the licensed and independent manufacturers are concerned. It is understood that the movement provides for the holding of an independent show in each of the cities named. If the scheme is carried out, then, there will be some interesting happenings in several localities.

In speaking about the coming New York exhibit, Secretary Butler, of the A. C. A., says: "In line with the club's policy to promote a show for the general good of the industry, the exhibition in December in the Grand Central Palace [illegible] is expected to be the largest automobile show ever given in New York, will be the members of the American Motor Car Manufacturers' Association, who have underwritten a large portion of the 60,000 square feet of space offered in the palace.

The show committee of the Automobile Club of America will manage the show in conjunction with Alfred Reeves, manager of the American Association.

In the new building the club will be much better off than it has been in previous shows, for there will be no additional expense for construction work like that required in the Armory last winter in making the unfinished building ready for the show, which materially cut down the profits. Of the show in December, one-half the profits will go to the automobile club's exhibition fund and one-half will be rebated to the exhibitors. Members of the A. M. C. M. A. have the advantage of an association rate in buying space. This announcement of date and place of the holding of the independent show will make no difference, it is believed, in the plans of the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers.

* * *

W. R. Kelly has resigned his position as manager of the Mills-Kennedy Co., agents for the Welch car. Mr. Kelly is to take a much needed rest, and will spend a few weeks in the woods of Maine before returning to the active and exacting work of the motor trade.

CORNWALL DEFEATS I. WRIGHT AT TENNIS

ST. JOHNSBURY, Vt., Aug. 9.—The defeat of Irving C. Wright, of Boston, the tennis champion of Canada and winner of the Wentworth Cup at Newcastle, N. H., last week, by Edward B. Cornwall, of Princeton, N. J., was the feature of the second day's play in the Vermont State tennis championship tournament here today.

Three sets were necessary for Cornwall's victory, 8—6, 6—2, 7—5.

Nolan Picks Goldfield and Sept. 3 for

NELSON AND GANS FIGHT

GOLDFIELD, Nev., Aug. 9.—"You may tell the AMERICAN that Gans and Nelson will fight for the lightweight championship of the world in Goldfield on Labor Day," said Billy Nolan, manager for Battling Nelson, as he stepped from the train this afternoon.

"Gans has declared repeatedly through the press that he is anxious to meet Nelson on any terms acceptable to the latter and he will now have his desire. We waited for San Francisco promoters to offer a purse commensurate with the prominence of the match, and now that your Goldfield camp has acted so promptly in every detail and after having accepted the terms offered there is no possibility of a further hitch to the signing of articles.

"In the matter of a choice of referee, I will name ten or a dozen of the most prominent of the ring, and Gans can select the one he prefers. It will be a trivial matter to reach an agreement upon the division of the purse.

"We are here to fight and the citizens of Goldfield may rest assured that they will have the greatest lightweight battle in their camp the world has ever seen."

The entire district has gone mad over the assurance of having the great battle. The Dane's manager was tendered an ovation when he stepped from the train.

"Nelson will be here Saturday night and will go into immediate training," continued Nolan, "and when he steps into the ring he will be in absolutely perfect condition. He has every confidence that he will master the great colored boxer and retain his title to the championship. He is very much pleased that he is going to visit the gold country of Southern Nevada, as he has often expressed a desire to see the sights of the section. He will have a corps of training partners and efforts will be made to perfect his condition."

The most talked of possibility as a referee in town is Larry Sullivan, president of the L. M. Sullivan Trust Company. Sullivan knows every trick and turn of the game, and it is apparently more than likely that he will prove acceptable to both principals.

In speaking of offers tendered him after he had accepted the purse given by Goldfield, Nolan stated that Eddie Graney had agreed to give $30,000 for Nelson's end of the purse, in order to secure the match for San Francisco. Nolan, however, told the honest blacksmith that it was too late and that he would unquestionably fight in Nevada's mining metropolis.

WEATHER TOO HOT FOR HARVARD

BOURNE END, Eng., Aug. 9.—Harvard and Cambridge were afloat yesterday and were watched by large crowds on both banks of the river and by the occupants of hundreds of boats.

The American oarsmen are creating a splendid impression as good sportsmen. Each crew had the satisfaction of seeing the other in its racing shell, but so far the crews have not met.

The Harvard crew is not rowing at all well. The men are out of condition and soon become winded. The shell is very unsteady, rolling from side to side, instead of keeping on an even keel.

Filoi is still rowing at three in the Harvard boat, and is likely to stay there for the race.

Rudolph C. Lehman, the English oarsman, who coached the Harvard crews of 1899 and 1900, said: "This will be one of the best sporting events ever seen in this country. I am impressed with the swing and powerful bodywork of Harvard. I think both the crews will prove above the average. Harvard will no longer be allowed to smoke."

The weather is still so hot that Coach Wray thinks the Harvard crew should make an early move to Putney. The temperature, he says, is not greater than the men are used to at home, but the moisture in the air makes it much more oppressive. He does not think it will suit work of an elementary character. There is not likely to be any fast rowing for some days. The Harvard crew were out again in the evening. Several short spurts at thirty strokes to the minute showed considerably more life in the strokes than heretofore.

Coach Wray says that the style of the Cambridge crew is more like Harvard than he expected. Their using a shorter slide means that they have more to do with their bodies than the Harvard crew.

The Cambridge men have not yet begun serious training.

CAPT. TENNEY KEEPING QUIET

Captain Tenney was up early this morning and waiting at the door of Chapin & Soden's office long before the office boy arrived to take down the shutters.

Judging from his actions it was evident that he had received some word during the night regarding his suspension, although he would not say a word regarding the matter.

"Haven't you received any word from President Pulliam regarding your lay off?" he was asked.

"I have nothing to say about the matter whatsoever," was the rather curt reply.

"Don't you know you are suspended?" asked the man in search of information.

"You heard what I said," was his answer as he beat a retreat.

If he plays this afternoon it's more than likely he hasn't received a call from the expected messenger boy of Umpire Klem's.

ESTATIC MAKES RECORD.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 9.—In winning the second heat of the 2:04 pace at the second day's meeting of the grand circuit, Estatic paced the mile in 2:04¼, making the fastest time of the meeting. Estatic won the first two heats and the race.

RAM'S HORN DEAD.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Ram's Horn, a four-year-old colt by Bute-Aunt Tessa, winner of this year's $25,000 Brighton handicap and of last year's Crescent City Derby, at New Orleans, died yesterday in his stall at the Gravesend race track, of inflammation of the bowels. Ram's Horn had been ailing ever since the Brighton handicap, and was too ill to be shipped to Saratoga, where he was entered in the richest stakes on the Spa program.

EFFORT WON RACE FOR THE KING'S CUP

NEWPORT, Aug. 9.—F. M. Smith's little sloop Effort won yesterday's race for the King's Cup. The new schooner Queen, owned by J. Rogers Maxwell, led the fleet at the finish, but lost the race by 9 seconds on time allowance. The race was sailed in a fine whole-topsail breeze from the east, over a 37½ mile course, 17 miles of which was a beat to windward in a smooth sea.

The Queen led nearly the entire distance, but the Effort reached for the finish very fast and just clinched the race. Nine yachts started, five schooners, three sloops and a yawl, and seven finished, the sloop Rainbow and the schooner Muriel meeting with accidents. The name of the Effort and her owner will be the first to be inscribed on the trophy presented to the club by King Edward VII.

The race from start to finish was a lively contest, continually interesting and always in doubt.

MACK LANDS 'EM ANY OLD TIME

Coombs, picked up by Connie Mack from the Colby College base ball team, recently beat the Nationals. They got only six hits off him. He has won most of his games since joining the Athletics.

Go to most any major league manager who would like to strengthen his pitching staff, right now, and ask him: "Why don't you go out and GET good pitchers in mid season. There's no use picking up untried youngsters, and the fellows who are making good in the minor leagues can't be taken away from their teams while the pennant races are on. You CAN'T GET A GOOD PITCHER AT THIS SEASON OF YEAR!"

But—MACK GOT COOMBS.

DANIELS IN CHAMP RACES

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—The 100-yard Metropolitan championship will be the principal feature of the third series of outdoor swimming races to be held at Travers Island by the New York Athletic Club on Saturday. Chief among the contestants will be C. M. Daniels, the world's champion swimmer, who has just returned from Europe, where he decisively defeated the world's fastest swimmers in a number of races at different distances, and established new time for each.

Warm rivals for this standard championship will be Daniels's clubmates, L. J. Goodwin, "Bill" Goodwin, holder of the fifty-yard championship; Lester Crane, C. D. Trubenbach and T. E. Kitching, Jr. Each of these men has been covering the distance in practice around record figures and can be expected to give the world's champion the race of his life.

Fred Tenney and his trailers are happy to-day as the Pirates have quit town. The Pittsburg game was a little too strong for the local baseball team, and they will now breathe a sigh of relief.

Tenney's band of in-and-outers could not meet a weaker club than the Mound City aggregation, and they hope to land at least three of the four games played. A double-header will be played Saturday.

The Cardinals are now occupying seventh place in the league race, and should the Tenneyites win three of the four games played here, they will come mighty near losing their privilege of being the leather medal team of the National League. There are but a few points dividing the rivals, and there should be much fun in the fight for seventh place laurels.

Manager McCloskey of the visitors, is in a happy frame of mind, despite the low position of his team, and he hopes to get even for his team's defeats in other cities by trouncing the Bostons good and plenty.

According to information received, Manager Tenney of the Boston Nationals will not play in the game this afternoon, as he has been suspended because of the row he had with Umpire Klem. In that case, Catcher O'Neill may have to cover the initial sack.

The Bostons were beaten yesterday by the Pirates for the fourth straight time by a score of 2 to 0.

Vic Willis, who lost a 1 to 0 game against "Little Cy" Young last Saturday, pitched for the Pirates and he had the same opponent as on the former occasion.

The Pirates batted harder than the home club, and coupled with some poor decisions by Umpire Klem, won the contest.

Young was in fine form, not giving a base on balls or hitting a man, while Willis was wild at times, passing two and hitting two more. The score:

NOTES OF THE GAME.

The Pirates won four out of five games in this city.

* * *

Brain and Howard were the only Tenneyites to connect safely—each getting two hits.

* * *

Wagner did not shine yesterday. He didn't make a hit, a big contrast to his showing the day before, when he hit safely every time in five.

* * *

"Little Cy" had great control. He didn't hit a man or give a base on balls.

* * *

Ganley was surely out at home plate in the second, when he tried to score on Ritchey's double. The fans greeted Umpire Klem's decision with cries of "thief" and "robber," but the latter paid no attention to the epithets.

* * *

Both runs made by the Pirates were earned.

* * *

Manager Clarke caught Brain's long fly in the first close to the left field fence.

* * *

To Nealon belonged the honor of making the first hit of the game, which he got in the second inning.

* * *

Wagner was responsible for a fast double play in the second, when he caught Dolan's liner and threw to Nealon, who caught Bates off first.

Every Little Girl Who Is Trying to Win "Happy House" by Writing a Letter on How to Keep House, Should Learn

HOW TO MAKE A PRETTY DOLL HOUSE SCRAP BOOK

Every Little Girl Has a Chance to Win the Doll House, and All Can Have Fun Making a Picture Book

ONE clever little girl is having lots of fun out of the pictures of "Happy House" and the "Happy" family which are being printed on this page from day to day.

She is having so much pleasure and the plan of it is all so simple that every little girl ought to hear about it. The girl's name is Emily May Gleason. She is eleven years old, and her home is in Gleasondale. You can see her picture in the new view of the doll house, printed to-day.

Now for her plan. This enterprising little girl has begun making a "Happy House" picture book—a regular little doll house on paper.

First she took a large picture of the doll house, one that was published some days ago, and of this she made a cover for her unique book. Then she took several sheets of firm white paper and bound them into a book with the cover, binding them together with a pretty pink string.

Then she has cut out the whole book according to the outlines of the doll house, chimneys, towers, gables and all. Inside, on the leaves, she has pasted different pictures of the house and the rooms as they have appeared on this page. Pretty soon she will have pictures of all the members of the "Happy" family and some more pictures of the house and rooms.

Had you thought of this plan to have a little doll house picture book? Why don't you try it? The Doll House Editor believes you can get lots of fun out of making the book.

And remember, the "Happy" family is going to have a lot of interesting adventures. All sorts of things happen to them. You can paste these little stories in your book and have every page illustrated.

The enterprising Glensondale girl sent her "Happy House" scrapbook to the Doll House Editor with the following letter:

> DEAR DOLL EDITOR:
> I am sending you a Happy House which I made from the pretty pictures you publish. I should try to keep the Happy House just as mamma keeps our house. I would keep it neat and clean, do my own housekeeping and teach the children myself. I should make the children pretty little dresses. The baby would have a nap twice a day and I would try to keep the children healthy. I wouldn't let them have much candy. I would give them a small allowance and would want them to keep an account of how it is spent.
> EMILY MAY GLEASON, 11 years.
> Gleasondale.

Remember, the girl who writes the best letter will win the doll house. Write the very best letter you can on how to keep house. Follow the instructions carefully.

Address your letter to Doll House Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN, No. 80 Summer street, Boston.

Letters From Girls Who Want the Doll's House

HERE are some nice letters from little girls who are trying to win the big doll house. Some letters will be printed every day. Of course all cannot be printed, for hundreds are being received in every mail.

If your letter is not here, do not be discouraged. It may be printed any day. If you have not written yet, send your letter to-day. If you have not seen the doll's house get your mother to take you to see it. It is now on exhibition in the window at the BOSTON AMERICAN office.

Here are the letters:

ALL-DAY PICNICS

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:
Every morning when I get up I would open the windows and take off the bed clothes to air. After the children had their breakfast, I would get them ready to go out and play. Then I would clean up the house. Tuesday I would have for washing day. Wednesday would be mending day. Thursday I would get up early and clean up the house, take a large lunch, and take the children on a picnic all day. Friday would be parlor day. Saturday I would do all the cleaning to be done and have a happy home for Sunday.

KATHERINE BROWN, 12 years.
No. 10 Gates street, Boston

A NICE DINNER

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:
I will tell you what I would do when I am keeping house. I would get up in the morning and wash my face and comb my hair, get breakfast, get the children up, give them their breakfast, then send them outdoors to play in the sand. And if I had a little baby I would put it in its carriage out on the porch to sleep. Then I would sweep and dust my rooms, go to market, get nice fresh vegetables, cook them, and have a nice dinner.

DOROTHY DALE, 9 Years.
No. 22 School street, Orange, Mass.

A MAINE WAY

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:
If I had a house of my own, I would get up early in the morning and air my bed and dress and get breakfast. If I had children I would give them a bath every morning and put on clean clothes, and let them stay outdoors and have a few pets. I would get good vegetables and a lot of fruit for my children. I would keep my house very neat and tidy. I would do all of these things if I had a house and children.

BESSIE M. FAIRCLOUGH, 12 years.
Richmond, Me.

BRIGHT AS A MIRROR

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:
When I grow up to be a lady I will keep my house lovely and clean, everything as bright as a mirror, and go to market, and buy nice meats and fruits for the meals. My children I would keep very clean and happy, bathe them every other night and put them to bed early, so in the morning they would be bright and healthy. I would buy them lots of toys and take them down on the beach in the Summer for a good time.

ANNIE COLMER, seven years.
No. 815 Lawrence street, Lowell.

ONE WAY TO DO IT

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:
Monday would be wash day, Tuesday ironing day, Wednesday mending day, Thursday shopping day. Friday would be sweeping day, Saturday baking and kitchen work, Sunday church day. I would be good to the children, but would make them mind. I would never promise them a thing unless I could give it. That's how I would run a house.

LOUISE GRANT, 10 years.
No. 32 Maverick Street, Marblehead.

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:
I am a little girl of six years. When I have a house of my own I shall do what my dear mother taught us—keep good house with little money. I'll teach my children to honor and respect old age, even the beggar, and protect the poor. I'll keep my children and house clean, neat and tidy. I shall send the children to school and church and teach them to be honest and truthful. These rules I shall never forget, and I will teach them to my children.

ROSE SHAPIRO.
No. 17 Rock avenue, Lynn.

JUST LIKE GOLD

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:
I would sweep the rooms twice every day, go in the corners and dust, too. I would make it look like gold. I would treat the children nicely and change their clothes every afternoon.

ADRIANA MILLER, 9 years.
No. 3 Park street, Boston.

WOULD KEEP BUSY

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:
If I had the house I'd take the tent down when it rained. I'd let dolly read the books in the library. I'd wash her clothes every Monday, and put dolly to sleep every night. I'd make the bed every day, and teach dolly to cook and help me. I'd clean dolly. I'd sweep the floor every day. I'd give dolly an orange every morning. I'd go to market and get the best. I'd be loving, kind and tender to my children. I'd dust the whole house every other day.

HARRIET M'GINNIS, 9 years.
No. 48 Cook Street, Charlestown.

Men Should Admire Business Women for Their Independence

By Beatrice Fairfax

WOMAN is much more independent than she used to be. Of that there is not the slightest doubt.

Her independence is largely due to the fact that there are so many ways open to her of earning her own living.

Twenty-five years ago there were few chances for the self-supporting woman.

She had her choice between teaching, sewing, becoming a saleswoman or entertaining domestic service.

Those were all womanly occupations, but they gave small chance for advancement.

The woman who advanced one step beyond the most conventional lines was accused of unwomanliness.

The result was that the average woman had little or no self-reliance once outside the narrow confines of her home.

She was brought up with the idea that the men of the family always knew best, that their word was law.

The Ideal Life

THEY let her do pretty much as she liked concerning the ordering of the household, but one step beyond that she must not go.

To marry, to be a good wife, mother and housekeeper, that was supposed to be the sum total of her ambitions.

No matter how many daughters there might be in a family, and no matter how little money to clothe and feed them, not one would be allowed to step out for herself and order her own way of living.

The term "bachelor girl" was an unknown quantity.

To-day many girls are self-supporting who are not driven to it by actual necessity.

The modern girl has learned that there is more content to be found in living the life of a busy bee than that of an idle butterfly.

Man's attitude toward woman's independence is exceedingly changeable. If he is personally interested in a woman he likes her to be clinging and dependent.

But if he is not she cannot be too independent. He does not want her to rely on him in the slightest degree.

He thinks woman in the aggregate should get out into the world and earn her own living.

He would prefer his own womankind to stay at home.

Woman has advanced a great deal in the last decade, but man's ideas regarding her have not advanced one step.

Should Admire Her

THERE is no reason why the fact of earning her own living should detract in the least from a girl's womanliness.

She can be modest and dignified and not so independent as to become unfeminine.

The girl who is needed at home is fulfilling her mission in life to the utmost.

But in families where there are several unmarried daughters it is far better for some of them to do something toward self-support.

It need not interfere with their matrimonial prospects, for the girl who makes a capable business woman should make a capable, economical wife.

Do not discourage the girls from becoming independent, young men.

Tell them that you admire them, and encourage them all you can.

It is said that there are eight million more women in the world than men.

So you see there are not enough husbands to go round, and a good many of the eight million superfluous ladies must support themselves.

The business woman of to-day is becoming a factor in the business world. She is fast making herself indispensable to her employers by her faithfulness to duty and general trustworthiness.

Instead of criticising her independence men should admire her for her capability.

CHAPTER LXXXV.—Continued

Copyright, 1906, by American Journal Examiner

OUT of the long line of people waiting, two and two along the pavement outside the gallery entrance, a girl had slipped from her place at their approach, leaving her companion. She came toward them eagerly, with a rather nervous hesitancy of manner, and cried:

"Walter!"

Rather a pretty girl, Haggard noticed, dressed in atrocious taste—yet a pretty girl, with something wistfully attractive in her face as she addressed his companion—timidly, as though only her intense eagerness made her venture to accost Grieve when with a stranger.

As Grieve saw her a little frown crossed his face. To have run up against Violet—and for her to come up and speak to him when he was with Haggard, perhaps to reproach him for not having written.

In the scheme of his new life Violet had no place. He had intended to let his silence tell her that, dispel any false hopes; but now in his annoyance a brutal impulse came to him as he looked at her, contrasting her mentally with the radiantly dressed women he had met at the restaurant.

It would be better to let Violet understand the altered position of things definitely, and at once; she might become a nuisance in the future unless he acted in a decisive, unmistakable manner now.

"Walter!" she cried, with a faint, timid smile, evidently expecting him to leave his companion for a minute or two to speak with her, thinking, no doubt, that his surprised pleasure at the unexpected recontre would be equal to her own.

CHAPTER LXXXVI.

Shadows on a Screen

GRIEVE looked steadily at the girl. His face betrayed no glimmer of recognition.

"I think you are making some mistake," he said, deliberately walking on.

As he spoke the chilling words the girl shrank back as before a blow, with a little strangled cry that broke from the depths of her woman's heart.

"Walter! You don't mean that!" She laid a hand on his coat sleeve imploringly. "You can't mean that! Say you are only joking—to tease me!"

The look of pain in her face made him wince for a moment. After all, he had been fond of her in the old days when her companionship had saved him from the loneliness of a friendless country lad in New York.

But he steeled himself; the snapped threads of their past friendship could not be woven together again; Violet was an impossible figure in the new glorious scheme of his life; Violet would think that things could be continued from that interesting point where they had been broken off—might worry him, unless he made the altered position clear once and for all. And he was angry with her for coming up and speaking to him when he was with Haggard; he was ashamed of the cheap, flimsy finery, and the sullen, resentful mood he was in, through being disappointed of Miss Langford's society, that the drink he had absorbed that day aggravated, helped to steel him against pity. He shook her finger off his arm and, without looking at her again, said impatiently:

"You have made some mistake. I repeat, I don't know you."

The girl crept away, white-faced and stricken, without another word.

Grieve gave a little awkward laugh, as he turned to Haggard, to explain the incident away.

Haggard Speaks Out

"Queer mistake of that girl, fancying she knew me—or pretending she fancied it," he said in an off-hand way, wondering what Haggard was thinking of it.

"Yet she called you Walter. I have a dim idea that your name is Walter," said Haggard coolly. "It was curious she should guess your name so correctly. But, of course, as a matter of fact, you did know her. One could not be mistaken."

Grieve looked at him, detecting the contemptuous ring.

"Well, perhaps I did once, but I didn't choose to keep up the acquaintance. I'm quite within my rights, I suppose?" he said aggressively.

"Of course, my opinion about it is of no importance, Grieve," said Haggard deliberately; he had seen the girl's face, as Grieve's words struck her like a blow, and he had been sorry for her. The girl actually cared for this cur. "But I feel inclined to give it. You're a cad, my man; and, if she only knew it, that girl is to be congratulated in having lost you for an acquaintance."

The Private Box

The words enraged Grieve—the more because, perhaps, he realized that he had cut rather a sorry figure in the affair; but Haggard did not listen to his furious rejoinder. He had turned away under pretext of buying an evening paper. He was feeling just then that he wanted to strike Grieve in the face, and for a moment the impulse was so strong that he was not quite sure that he could trust himself. What an incredible cur the man was!

That story of the two convicts fettered together, that had been running in his mind all that day, with the hatred between them that grew so intense that at last one killed the other—if the man who died was at all like Grieve, the other partner of that bondage did right to kill him! Haggard wondered if those chains of iron galled more than the invisible bondage that bound him to Grieve.

The doors of the Arabesque had opened; that great hall, fronted from roof to pavement with gleaming lights of amber and subdued crimson, like some barbaric palace of the East. Haggard entered the splendid marble vestibule and walked to the box office. One box remained vacant and he secured it.

The privacy of the box appealed to him for more reasons than one. He did not wish to encounter any possible acquaintances. And he intended to secure possession of that packet to-night. It ought not to be very difficult to rifle the pocket of a drunken man in the shelter of a private box.

They went into their box. Grieve stood at the front looking down, watching the great theatre filling.

Dangerous Game

There was the thunder of feet surging into the gallery. An eager crowd was scrambling for the best places in pit and amphitheatre; acquaintances shouted out greeting to newcomers. Grieve had never watched the scene from a box before, and that fact gave it a new point of view of interest. Haggard sat back, glancing at his newspaper. He could not bring himself to talk to Grieve.

As he skimmed the columns, Haggard's attention was attracted by a paragraph, and he suddenly touched Grieve on the arm.

"Here is something that will interest you," he said, grimly, "since you are so fond of picking up casual acquaintances at public bars."

He pointed to the paragraph. Grieve took the paper and read it:

"The New York public is threatened with an outbreak of a nefarious practice, which, unless checked, seems likely to assume alarming proportions. It is a known fact that of the persons taken to the police stations lately, under the belief that they were drunk, practically only a small proportion have been really in that condition, and a medical examination has shown that they have been drugged."

The article went on to instance one of the cases.

A gentleman of means had looked in at a bar after the theatre, and there fell into conversation with a well-dressed stranger. While they talked, this stranger, as it subsequently appeared, contrived to pass some chloral, which is a colorless liquid, into the man's glass.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Summer Girls Dress to Please the Men

NO "mere man" has any conception of what a woman has to go through in order that she may appear before him, the calm, unruffled, beruffled, perfectly gowned creature he meets at the Summer resorts.

He does know, however, that at no season of the year does she appear so charmingly costumed. Nor is she unaware of the fact that the attention she receives from these masculine adjuncts to the Summer resort is in direct ratio to the harmony between herself and her gowns.

First she took account of stock, refurbished all the frocks that could be made to serve a second or a third Summer, and made each as complete in detail as though it were new; that is, if fresh ribbons were needed she got them; slippers, those, too.

She saw that every hook was in its place and that an eye accompanied it. It is a mistake to leave these things to be done "at odd times." The odd time, ten to one, comes when one has just fifteen minutes in which to dress.

In buying the Summer trousseau one is allowed more latitude than in the purchase of Winter things, for two reasons. The thin materials come cheaper and they are generally good without much alteration, for two seasons at least. One cannot have too many mulls and muslins and nothing is prettier in the Summer time.

It is rather a good idea to have two skirts with the street suit, then one is kept spick and span for Fall, while the other has been doing duty with shirt waists.

There is no denying the fact, much as we adore the separate blouse, that there is a distinct charm born of harmony that makes the entire suit appeal to one very strongly, and this Summer's girl will show a decided partiality to it.

If one has any individuality in the matter of dress she will find the home dressmaker, the good home dressmaker, a positive boon, for she is then allowed some voice in the matter.

This season, since all colors and dozens of new shades are worn, there are many fatal mistakes made in selecting what is becoming, and our wise woman looks out for shoals. She realizes that no matter how fascinating a fad Dame Fashion may have evolved, it is not necessarily fascinating for her unless she can give it a twist or a turn that shall make it suit her.

Health Hints for Hot Weather

REMEMBER the danger of over-ripe and under-ripe fruit in Summer. Both of these are the cause of a great deal of illness.

Trouble from either of these causes is best treated by a dose of castor oil, because this clears away the irritating matter that is causing the trouble and so prevents it from going further.

Remember that an excellent thing for healing and cooling the skin when it has been exposed to sunburn is the juice of a freshly gathered cucumber.

This should be pared and sliced, the juice expressed by squeezing in a lemon squeezer or through muslin, and then mixed with the same quantity of a mixture of equal parts of glycerine and rose water.

Don't forget that it is dangerous to eat pork in hot weather. Its use then should always be discontinued. This does not, of course, apply to well-cured ham and bacon, but to fresh or slightly salted pork.

"Burn your refuse," should be the keynote of the household which wishes to keep well in Summer time. Refuse should be burnt at all seasons, but it is especially necessary in hot weather, when vegetable and other organic matters quickly putrefy and pollute the surrounding atmosphere.

Remember that cleanliness in refrigerators and cupboards is the best way to keep them free from flies—those pests of the Summer!

Keep a plentiful supply of cheesecloth—it is very cheap—at hand. There is nothing better for throwing over dishes containing cold meat, fish, etc., and for covering milk jugs and all vessels containing liquids, and thus preventing flies drowning themselves in these beverages.

Remember that fish which is in the least degree tainted is highly dangerous to eat. A few hours' in a badly ventilated cupboard on a hot afternoon will render the fish awaiting cooking for evening dinner unfit to be eaten.

It is much better in sultry weather if you have not a refrigerator well supplied with ice to cook the fish at once when it comes in, and serve it rewarmed—or, better still, cold—with mayonnaise sauce and salad.

Remember that an excellent way for keeping water beautifully cold in hot weather is the following: Take a thin glass jug or bottle, wrap a piece of well-wetted linen tightly round it (a stocking leg drawn over a bottle answers excellently), so that it is covered from top to bottom.

Fill it with cold water and stand it in a shallow dish of water in the shade where a draught of air can blow upon it. If the linen becomes dry before the water is required it must be wetted again.

Freckles,
Liver Spots,
Moth Patches.

THESE unsightly blemishes which completely disfigure the complexion are produced by various causes, although all are pigmentary discolorations.

The unfortunate victim is very often made the butt of ridicule by friends who do not know the unhappiness their taunts cause.

There is no reason for continued suffering, because the scientific treatments given at the Woodbury Institute afford quick relief from these troubles. All are quickly and entirely overcome.

MORSE BACK FOR ICE PROBE

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, Aug. 9.—Charles W. Morse, former president of the American Ice Company, has abandoned a long-planned automobile tour of Europe to sail yesterday on the steamship Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse for New York, accompanied by his attorney, Philip Britt.

Mrs. Morse is left in Paris, and the sudden change of plans is believed to be due to the necessity for the ice magnate's presence in New York because of the inquisition there into the actions of the trust.

It is said that developments alarmed Mr. Morse and his legal adviser, and they decided to return home.

Why Josiah Quincy Is Kicking Up So Much Dust

The Money Power, Which Hires Him, Wants to Make the Tariff a State Issue so as to Obscure the Real Fight

The Hon. Josiah Quincy, echoing his master's voice, the banking house of Kidder, Peabody & Co., which counts the control of the Democratic State and city machine as one of its financial assets, is now attempting to make tariff revision the issue of the coming State campaign in a letter to the town and city committees.

The gentlemen of the New York and Boston corporations, who speak through Mr. Quincy, are now attempting, for purposes of deception, to drag again into the public gaze that wretched, threadbare farce, so naked of every virtue as a sound Democratic issue, that to hold it up again before the Democratic voters is almost indecent exposure.

Revise the tariff! Make tariff the issue! This has been the cry of every dying cause and every discredited group of politicians during the last hundred years of our political history.

It has been a political issue in nearly every campaign during the last century, but there never has yet been an honest revision of the tariff and there never will be an honest revision of the tariff so long as men like Mr. Quincy are its advocates and tinkers.

Whenever the Democratic leaders have outraged the confidence of their party and of the country, and weakened their party almost to the point of dissolution, it has been when they have juggled with that worn-out fraud called "tariff revision."

But it must not be assumed that these gentlemen, styled Democratic leaders, have failed of their purpose when they have raised this delusive issue. When we know their purposes, we can appreciate how well this issue serves them.

These gentlemen, like Mr. Quincy, are, of course, not their own masters. They are the servants of men who love neither party nor country, save as they can use both to swell their own private fortunes. They control both parties, when they can, through the manoeuvring of such men as Mr. Quincy.

In the plans of Mr. William A. Gaston, Mr. Robert Winsor of the banking house of Kidder, Peabody & Co., Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, Mr. Belmont, Mr. Rockefeller and other mad seekers after great private fortunes, at their country's expense, a political party is just a machine by which to plunder the public.

When they buy the control of such a machine, they put in charge men who understand its mechanism like Mr. Quincy to run the machine in their interests. When their masters say the word, Mr. Quincy and his fellow servants turn on or off the throttle as the case may be.

These machine experts, like Mr. Quincy, care for their machine so long as it can serve the purposes of their masters, and not a moment longer. When, as in 1896, the machine falls into the hands of the people, they do all they can to wreck it, that it may not be used against their masters.

When the masses of the Democratic party once open their eyes to the fact that gentlemen like Mr. Quincy do not serve the Democratic party, but use it for others, they will laugh at such a joke as Mr. Quincy's letter on the tariff issue.

For nearly a hundred years men like Mr. Quincy have used the tariff question to throw dust in the eyes of the Democratic masses that they might not see and fight for the real issues of the campaign. Whenever these gentlemen, who assume to be party leaders, are about to perpetrate some monstrous fraud upon the party, they cry, "Let us revise the tariff."

The pitiable Parker crept through the last presidential campaign on a tariff-revision issue. When popular indignation is running high, as it is to-day, against these overweening grafters whom Mr. Quincy serves, and the masses of the Democratic party propose to nominate honest men for public office, and to fight an honest fight for live and beneficial policies, gentlemen like Mr. Quincy cry "Revise the tariff."

If, by chance, victory comes, what happens? Why, if the Sugar Trust has contributed more money to the campaign funds than the Beef Trust, the tariff on sugar is raised and the tariff on beef and hides is lowered; and if the Beef Trust has contributed more money to the campaign funds than the Sugar Trust the tariff on beef and hides is raised and the tariff on sugar is lowered.

This is "tariff revision." The people pay the bills. Mr. Quincy's masters smile and Mr. Quincy smiles.

But then comes the reaction like the terrible Democratic overthrow in 1894. The people are outraged and disgusted. Honest, intelligent men leave the Democratic party and the party is turned out of power and utterly discredited for the next quarter of a century. Not until a new generation arises, which has forgotten the former farce, is the country persuaded to try another experiment with "Democracy" and tariff revision.

We sympathize with the honest Republicans who believe that the tariff ought to be revised. They are right, but they cannot hope longer to make issues for the Democratic party. The Democratic party is too great to be a tail to any faction in the Republican party.

There are other issues of far greater importance than the revision of the tariff.

Most of those men in the Democratic party who seek to raise the question do so in order to obscure the great questions which most concern the State, and on which a real Democratic victory can be achieved in this State.

The people of Massachusetts want to see the laws enforced. They are determined to elect men who will enforce them.

The Democrats want to see the Democratic party freed from the control of those great public plunderers whose control is personified in Mr. Quincy and Mr. Gaston.

The trail from the office of J. Pierpont Morgan in Wall street to the banking house of Kidder, Peabody & Co., in Devonshire street, thence to the office of Gaston, Snow & Saltonstall on State street, and thence to the office of Josiah Quincy at No. 4 Liberty square, is becoming a little too well beaten to suit the Democratic voters. They know that there is no room for two corporation parties in this country or in this State. They are determined that the Democratic party shall become democratic again, so that the people can have some confidence in its professions.

Mr. Quincy is an issue. Mr. Gaston is an issue. The house of Kidder, Peabody is an issue. The Boston Elevated is an issue. The Consolidated Gas Company is an issue. The Edison Electric Light Company is an issue. And these issues will not down. Tariff revision nonsense will not obscure them. They will not be settled until they are settled right.

The last feast for Mr. Quincy and his masters has been spread. The handwriting is already upon the wall. Let Mr. Quincy read it and take warning.

There are other employments more honorable than the serving of such masters for such purposes.

Little Editorials from the People

DO THE BOYS WANT A DOLL HOUSE?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

This evening, in my leisure moments, after a hot day's "bumping" with sample case and smile, irrespective of the torrid atmosphere, I read in your paper something about the "really big beautiful doll house." It's for girls to win it. Give the little boys a chance. For ever and anon the "boy," be he small, with curly ringlets, or aged, with "hair streaked with iron gray," as some novelist would tell us, must provide the "beautiful" doll house. For after all, they are our "doll houses," our delights, our pleasures, in age as in youth. Every healthy, aggressive boy has his house in mind and although he may not obtain it until he has passed the age when an "monsieur le docteur" said man should be subjected to asphyxiation by chloroform he has hope and pride in it. Therefore I say, Mr. Editor Man, do give the boys an opportunity to say how he thinks "this house should be kept."

LOVE IS ALL

By Harry B. Metcalf

THERE was gleam of gold,
And raiment to allure, and rank and title old,
And sorrow and a sigh,
As Love passed by.

THERE was humble fare,
And treasure scant, and name of worldly glamor bare.
And peace with heaven kin,
As Love came in.

Behind the Throne

By Wex Jones

THE Czar tossed uneasily upon his harveyized mattress.

Suddenly the electric alarm bell rang, warning him of the approach of his chamberlain.

Slowly the Czar's armored nightcap appeared above the steel blanket.

"Your Majesty, the people want a constitution."

"Issue another proclamation," came in muffled tones from the protected bed. "And, say, when you go out tell my armorer that there's a rivet loose in my pajamas and it's kept me awake all night."

"But the people don't want any more proclamations. The soldiers are in revolt, the navy is disaffected, and the workmen are striking like 12 o'clock."

"I have a plan to escape trouble," said the Czar.

"Good, Your Majesty," said the chamberlain.

"Is my yacht ready to sail?"

"Steam is up, Your Majesty."

"Then," said the Czar, rapidly donning a wrought-iron greatcoat, "I shall skidoo-sky to England."

"What to do, Your Majesty?"

"To stay, chumpovitch!"

And, pulling on his bombproof socks, his Czarship beat it for the fleet Pole Star.
